INTRODUCTION

Few people probably know that some fifty years ago an attempt was made to establish a Catholic Record Society. For many reasons the times seemed favourable for such an undertaking, and after much deliberation the late Lord Acton and others endeavoured to obtain the support of the Catholic body for a society which it was proposed to call the "Lingard Club," very similar to the society which now presents its members with the first volume of its transactions. The then Sir John Acton was keen and even enthusiastic on the matter, and he promised as his initial contribution to the work of the club, a list of printed books and documents dealing with Catholics and Catholic interests in the latter half of the sixteenth century and the first half of the seventeenth: a work which would have been invaluable, and which his extensive and peculiar—not to say astonishing—knowledge of the literature of that period rendered him especially qualified to undertake. According to the project, this was to have been accompanied or followed by a similar catalogue of papers and documents of interest and importance for Catholic history during the same period, which were then still unprinted in the Public Record Office, the British Museum and elsewhere. This list of manuscript sources would have been undertaken by Mr Richard Simpson, who by long and arduous researches in archives and libraries, both in England and abroad, had gathered together extensive collections illustrating the condition of Catholics under Elizabeth and James I, which would have enabled him not only to compile the invaluable catalogue suggested, but to have followed it up with transcripts of papers up to that time wholly unknown. Unfortunately the project failed to elicit the support of the Catholics, and the "Lingard Club" was still-born in the minds of the small but brilliant band of scholars who had conceived the idea.

Since that time, of course, much has been done by individual enterprise to make accessible many of the tracts and documents necessary to understand the history of Catholics in the early days of religious persecution. In this connection the names of the late Fathers Knox, Bridgett and Morris, S.J., suggest themselves at once as pioneer toilers in this branch of our history; whilst Br Foley's "Records," and above all, Mr Gillow's invaluable "Biographical Dictionary of the English Catholics" are veritable storehouses of information. None of these, however, have done what it is now the sanguine hope of the Catholic Record Society to accomplish for the Catholic body, and which it certainly will accomplish in time if it only succeeds in securing adequate support.

As to the utility and importance of the work proposed to be done by the Society, there can hardly be two opinions. We should, indeed, be degenerate children of our forefathers if we did not take an interest in the records of their sufferings to preserve the Catholic faith for their posterity. These records are scattered in various archives and libraries, public and private, and some of them have hitherto been quite inaccessible to the ordinary worker. Many of the documents also are unknown, save to the few, and exist only in manuscripts frequently difficult, if not impossible to be deciphered, except by the expert paleographer. It is in order to make these scattered materials for our Catholic history known that the Catholic Record Society has been called into existence, and appeals for help to carry on its work and to extend it. Anything, no matter what it may be, that will help us to realize those "brave days of old," when English Catholics took their lives in their hands and kept the faith in spite of the rack and the gibbet, should surely be welcomed by all who have any love for the religion they have received, in part, at least, through their sufferings. It is not in any spirit of hostility to those who were the cause of those sufferings, whilst endeavouring to establish their forms of religious worship and practice, by stamping out the remnant of those who refused to conform, that we love to record and to proclaim the trials and troubles of their victims ; time, which has softened, if it has not altogether wiped out the tears and sorrows of those days, has taken, too, the bitterness from our hearts and memories. To-day we are glad rather to rejoice in the possession of a race of heroes for our Catholic ancestors in those valiant Englishmen who, by the issue of their combat, have won the right to be crowned as conquerors.

The Catholic Record Society, then, as its name suggests, in the first place contemplates the publication of documents dealing with Catholic history. The main intention of its founders and first directors is the transcription of papers, registers, etc., in order to preserve them from the decay to which all such records are subject, and to furnish material to the future historian of the Catholic religion of this country. Editing is, of course, to some extent necessary, but it has been wisely determined to do as little of this as possible, and to give only sufficient notes to explain difficulties in the text, to illustrate it, or to call the reader's attention to some interesting fact connected with it. Another important feature in the work of the Society is the determination to print the whole of every document. Nothing can be more misleading than mere extracts. What to one editor may appear to be of little consequence, to another might seem most valuable, and a student might be looking for just the very part it has been thought proper to omit. The same applies to the giving of a mere précis, and consequently the only safe and sound method worthy of a Record Society, is to print every item in full; and where a document is in Latin, to give both the original and a translation, if it is thought desirable, but always to give the original text. This sound rule is justified in the present volume, where it must be borne in mind that the Latin document is the original, and that in more than one particular the translation does not convey the sense of what Nicholas Sander wrote.

The contents of this first volume, of what we all hope may prove to be a long and continuous series, gives certain promise for the future. The documents printed are at once interesting, valuable, and, for the most part, hitherto unknown, or, at least, unused. In this brief Introduction it is possible, of course, merely to touch upon some few of the matters of interest contained in the papers of the volume. The first paper printed is an important report made by Dr Nicholas Sander to Cardinal Moroni on the state of Catholics in England about the year 1561. The original document, of which a transcript is in our Record Office, is in the Vatican Archives. It is in Latin, but for the sake of the general reader a translation, although not a very satisfactory one, is furnished. The importance of the narrative is that the author was a first-hand witness. He had every opportunity of personally knowing the events he describes, and, although there are some few obvious inaccuracies, as, for example, the misplacing of events, e.g., putting the Westminster Conference before the opening of Parliament (pp 3, 7), in the main, the story of the first years of Elizabeth's reign would appear to be verifiable. Nicholas Sander is chiefly known by his work on the "Origin and Progress of the Schism," which was published in 1585, three years after his death, by Edward Rishton, and by his "De Visibili Monarchia." Numerous editions of his history of the Schism appeared: in fact it was re-edited no less than fifteen times within ten years of its first appearance, and the story of the change of religion, as told by Sander in this book, has been the basis of every Catholic history of the English Reformation since. Although it was attacked by Burnet, Heylin, and others as a very tissue of untruths, Mr David Lewis, in the introduction to his translation of the book, and in the critical notes he furnished, did much to vindicate its general trustworthiness. To quote the words of Mr Gillow in our days, "Full justice is given to its accuracy and honest intent by recent historians." The writer on Sander in the "Dictionary of National Biography" also says, in regard to Burnet's attack upon this work, against which, indeed, the "History of the Reformation" was written, "In almost every disputed point he has been proved right and Burnet wrong." It is worth while remembering this in considering the value of the long paper from the pen of Sander, now first printed, and which will be used in the Rev. Mr G. Phillips' important work on "The Extinction of the Ancient Hierarchy," which which is to shortly appear.

The author, Nicholas Sander, was educated at Winchester and New College, Oxford—in the present paper he calls New "my" college—and, in Mary's reign, he became Regius Professor of Canon Law. After Elizabeth's defection from the Catholic faith, he fled abroad and was ordained priest at Rome by Bishop Goldwell of St Asaph, who also had escaped over the sea. It must have been in the early days of his sojourn in Italy that Cardinal Moroni requested him to put down his recollections of what had happened in this country on the accession of Queen Elizabeth and for "two and a half years" afterwards.

In this tract the author has preserved to us many details of the constancy in suffering for the faith shown by the bishops and other

Catholics in the first years of Elizabeth. He regrets that his exile abroad has not allowed him to state exactly the date of death in each case; but, with this exception, he has tried, in giving his information to Cardinal Moroni, to carry out the advice and spirit of St Cyprian as set forth in one of his epistles. "On the bodies," he says, "of all (who although they have not been tortured in prison, yet leave the stage [of this world] by a glorious death) let there be bestowed a most loving and watchful care. For their honourable constancy has been ample enough for them to be joined to the ranks of the blessed martyrs. As far as they could they endured, because they were ready and eager to suffer. He who in God's sight offered himself to torments and to death has suffered all he wished to suffer; for he has not shrunk from tortures but rather tortures have shrunk from him; . . . . unto the very end they have preserved their meritorious virtues uncorrupted and stainless. Even to death have they come faithful, steadfast and unconquered. When to resolute desire, and to testimony in prison and bonds, their end comes in death, the glory of a martyr's crown is consummated." It is with these sentiments that Catholics ever since have regarded these men as martyrs and confessors for the faith. It may be said of them what St Jerome said of St John the Evangelist: "Martyrio omnium non defuisse, et bibisse calicem confessionis, quem et tres pueri in camino ignis biberunt, licet persecutor non fuderit sanguinem." *

Sander then proceeds to give an account of the sufferings of the Catholic bishops, deans, clergy and laymen, who, to his knowledge, had suffered in prison and in many other ways. Considerable light is thrown in the course of this narrative upon points of general interest connected with the change of religion on the accession of Elizabeth. For example, the action of Bishop Oglethorpe of Carlisle in consenting to crown Queen Elizabeth has been frequently criticized. In this report to Cardinal Moroni, Sander thus explains the act: "The Bishop of Carlisle at length undertook the ceremony, after many of the others had been asked in vain, not as a favourer of heresy but lest, if no one should anoint her, the queen should thereby be enraged and made more inclined to overthrow religion. Things, moreover, were not then so desperate as to prevent many from hoping that she might be turned from her purpose" (p. 7).

It has always been somewhat difficult from the account given by Il Schipanoya, as printed in the "Venetian Calendar of State Papers," and that of an eyewitness printed in Nichols's "Progresses of Queen Elizabeth," to make out what share the bishops generally took in the ceremony of the coronation. Sander, writing for Cardinal Moroni's information, says that the bishops "continued present until they saw a departure made from the ancient rite of the Sacrifice of the Mass; for the queen had introduced a new kind of Mass, in which the consecrated Host was not held up for the adoration of the people." We might be inclined, perhaps, to think that Sander had here confused with the coronation ceremony the incident of the previous Christmas Day in the royal chapel, but this is also recorded in the report, a few pages further on (p. 11). It would seem, then, not improbable that Queen Elizabeth gave the same order as to the elevation of the sacred Host at her coronation as she had done in her private chapel, and that the bishops left the Abbey after the gospel in a body, rather than be present at this mutilated service. The Venetian ambassador expressly says they did not leave the church with the queen, and, in his particular account of the subsequent festivities, he makes no mention of them. It must also be remembered that it was not Bishop Oglethorpe who celebrated the Mass, but George Carew, the dean of the queen's chapel.

It is most difficult to make any selection of matters of interest where there is so much; but we may be allowed, perhaps, merely to select one or two items almost at haphazard. A point, which has hitherto been somewhat obscure, about Archbishop Heath, the chancellor, on Elizabeth's accession, is cleared up by the later version of this narrative. The archbishop resigned the chancellorship immediately after Mary's death. Of this there does not appear to be much room for doubt, but he still held the office of councillor, and it was from this and not from the chancellorship which the queen hesitated to remove him (p. 2).* Of the same illustrious confessor Sander records that, when the Count de Feria visited him before his imprisonment, and asked his advice as to what was to be done in the then state of affairs, he replied, "There is nothing to be done, but everything, whatever God may will, to be endured." It was, indeed, proper that so glorious a confessor should be cheerful even in persecution. As he would neither crown the queen nor take the oath of supremacy to a woman, for a year and a few months after his deprivation he was at one time left free, at another dragged back to prison; and leave to live where he liked would have been given him by the queen and council if only he would have promised to be present at the ecclesiastical "services" (p. 15).† His motto was one worthy of St Augustine, "Quicquid est contra fidem Catholicam hæresis est; quicquid contra unitatem scisma est."

Sander notes an interesting point as to the passing of the Act of Uniformity. "The fundamental law of the English Parliament is," he says, "that nothing is voted which is not there freely determined by the three estates, the spirituality which consists of all the bishops and abbots; the lords temporal consisting of the dukes, marquesses, earls, viscounts and simple barons, and of the commonalty, two burgesses from the cities and principal towns, as well as knights and 'prefects' of each shire. When, therefore, they came to vote, not a single bishop or abbot spoke against the Catholic religion, and thus one entire estate refused to assent to change it. It is, consequently, clear not only that the laws now in force in England are wicked and impious, but that they are not laws at all, nor need

* In the translation (p. 25 and the note, ibid.) it would appear that the hesitation to remove the archbishop had reference to the chancellorship.

† The translation (p. 38) misses the sense of the Latin when it says that "he was left at liberty for a year and a few months after his deprivation."

they be revoked by Parliament since they were not passed by its authority and are mere tyrannical ordinances passed by a few against the constitutional law of Parliament." (p. 9).

To pass on. The second document, or rather series of documents, printed in this volume, contains the "Official Lists of Prisoners for Religion" during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Few of these, although used by historians of the period, have hitherto found their way into print, notwithstanding their obvious utility and importance. The lists are introduced by a useful note explaining where the various prisons such as the "King's Bench," the "Fleet," the "Marshalsea," the "Counter," the "Clinck," etc., were situated. Looking down these lists the reader's attention is arrested constantly by well-known names. In the first, for example, we find among "the bishops, doctors and pristes that were prisoners in the Flytte for Religion synse the fyrste yere of the raygne of quene Elizabeth anno domini 1558," the record of the incarceration of Bishop Scott of Chester, and the two Harpesfields, Nicholas and John. The reader will also note the names of several ladies and gentlemen who were in the Fleet dungeons "for hyeryng of Mass." In the returns of the London prisons, made at Midsummer 1561, in the same way, we note the name of Bishop Bonner, in the Marshalsea "for matters of religion," and that of two priests "for saying of Mass" and "for hearing of Mass."

The third document printed has special interest inasmuch as it forms the concluding portion of the "Autobiography of Father William Weston, S.J." The first part has long been well known, as it was published by the late Father Morris in the second series of his "Troubles of our Catholic Forefathers." The Stonyhurst MS., from which this was taken, is incomplete, and it has been Father Pollen's fortune to find "in a Jesuit archive" the entire narrative. This is now printed in a translation supplied by Father Joseph Rickaby, S.J. It takes up Father Weston's story from his deportation from Wisbeach to London, and describes the discomforts of the journey and the hardships endured as a prisoner and a Jesuit in the hands of two pursuivants, who never left him for a moment either by day or night, each warning him against the treachery of the other. Incidentally in this touching narrative we have an account of the death of one of those almost nameless Catholic heroes, of whom there were doubtless many, who underwent the most terrible sufferings for conscience' sake. "Before my eyes," writes Father Weston, "there was carried out for burial, in mean style enough, a Catholic who had endured this wretched prison [the Tower] with great vigour of mind and constancy. His name was Humerston, as my keeper told me, he had a very stern man appointed to guard him, who, besides many other things, used to beat him and cudgel him most cruelly. Under these and the other almost endless miseries of his prison—filth, confinement, solitude, hunger, scourges or cudgels—he had gone out of his mind, and for utter prostration of body and limb for nearly three years before his death he had been so bedridden, that he could not even turn over on his side without help, and that was very seldom afforded him." Not unlike this case, as Father Weston says, was that of a Catholic officer whom "I found at my entrance, bearing his five years' imprisonment with constancy, though weighed down with much infirmity and want."

Following on Father Weston's narrative there are printed important papers relating to the martyrs for religion in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The story of the martyrdom of the Venerable John Boste in 1594 derives special interest, as it is told by the Venerable Christopher Robinson, another priest who was himself subsequently executed at Carlisle for his faith. The "Notebook of John Southcote, D.D.," from a MS. in the possession of the Bishop of Southwark, and prepared for publication by the late Father John Morris, affords a great deal of varied information about the life and difficulties of a priest on the English mission between the years 1623 and 1637. The section called "Brief Records," gives many notices of events in England from the year 1623; the re-enactment of the penal laws against Catholics, and especially against priests, about this time, are recorded; a note in 1628 speaks of the martyrdom of Father Arrowsmith at Lancaster on August 28; and the writer says that "one Harst, a layman, was executed about the same time for religion in the same place" (p. 104); the lists of "Dead friends and acquaintances," not only give the names, but the places where they resided and the dates of their deaths. At p. 114 is printed Dr Southcote's "directions for sending letters," which speak volumes about the difficulties of communication in those days experienced, no doubt, by all, but in particular by Catholics, who had necessarily to guard against the inquisitive inquiries of Government spies. One example from this section may perhaps be allowed: "Ireland. The Irish merchants of Dublin come into England against Easter. They be at Bosome's Inn, in St Lawrence Lane, Cheapside. Also they come again at the beginning of August. Thomas Flemmin, Archbishop of Dublin. James Talbot alias Eustach Vic-General. Tho. Coel, priest, Luke Rochford, Parish priest."

It is impossible here even to suggest the most interesting items of information on Catholics and Catholic matters given in this first volume of the Catholic Record Society. For genealogists the "Huddleston Obituaries," edited by Mr Joseph Gillow, will afford much information and pleasure. The obits are noted in the calendar of a missal belonging to the Benedictine, Father John Denis Huddleston, whilst he was chaplain to the Prestons and Inglebys. The same may be said of other "Family Notes" printed as Nos. IX, X, XI, XII and XIII of the volume. No. XIV—a long document—gives the "Registers of the Catholic Mission of Winchester." We are grateful to the Council of the Society for thus including so important a specimen of our old Registers in their first issue. It is difficult to exaggerate the utility, and, indeed, importance of parochial registers for general and family history, and when the entries go back, as these do, to the early part of the eighteenth century, the registers become precious records of those who kept the faith during that very dark period, when the general ostra-cism of Catholics succeeded the even more tolerable active persecution endured so nobly by their forefathers. In the introductory note to this section of the volume the reader is told that the transcript was made by the late Father Raymond Palmer, O.P., for Mr F. A. Crisp, F.S.A., who has placed it at the disposal of the Catholic Record Society. Besides the long lists of Catholic names furnished in these pages, incidentally there are to be found many items of general interest.

To those who know the old cemetery of St James at Winchester, not the least important portion of these registers will be the record of those who were buried their from time to time. In many ways, St James's is, for us Catholics, one of the most interesting spots in England. From pre-Reformation days no one but a Catholic has been laid to rest in that sacred ground. When in Elizabeth's days a Catholic gentleman, of the Tichbourne stock, died, and his body was denied burial in the Protestant churchyards, because he had refused to conform to the State religion, it was suggested by some fellow Catholics of the city, who remembered St James's in old Catholic days, to carry the body thither and bury it there. From that day to this the Catholics have held possession of the ground, and the interments of many Winchester Catholics and of those of the neighbourhood are entered in these pages.

Among the "curiosities" to be found in what many may perhaps regard as a mere dry catalogue of names, may be noted the following : On page 193 is given by Bishop Milner the certificate of the baptism in 1796 of four natives of the Island of Java and of their execution. Dr Milner, in the Supplement to his " Letters to a Prebendary," has left us an account of this strange entry. It appears that four Lascars were condemned to death at Winchester for the murder of one of their companions. Finding that nothing whatever was being done for their souls, Dr Milner obtained permission to offer them his services to prepare for their end. For the three days which intervened between this and their execution, the priest spent nearly all his time with those savages, and by the help of signs and the few words of English they knew, he succeeded in instructing them sufficiently in the essential mysteries of religion, and in the end they received baptism at his hands with evident consolation and devotion, taking the names of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. When they came to the gallows they knelt down, and pointing to heaven, died with evident faith and resignation.

An entry of baptism on February 6, 1771, printed on p. 170, is that of the great Dr Lingard, the historian, and another entry, on p. 209, dated April 7, 1805, records the burial of Inigo Jones, aged 56, possibly a member of the family of the celebrated architect of that name.

Towards the close of the eighteenth century this register contains a good deal about the French refugees at the time of the great revolution and about the prisoners who were interred at Winchester. The Confirmation lists afford us many names of the pupils at the Benedictine Convent, then in the city opposite the Catholic Church, and now at East Bergholt in Suffolk; and also those at the Franciscan nuns then living at Abbey House, which convent, in May, 1808, removed to their present abode at Taunton.

The Register shows how common the punishment of hanging was towards the close of the eighteenth century. At p. 187 are given the names of ten Catholics, most them, from their name, Irishmen, who were hanged at "Block House Point." This was in 1787, and the following year is recorded the execution of two other Catholics, one of whom is declared in the Register to have been the victim of false testimony, and as an innocent man was buried in the cemetery of St James's. In the list of those interred in the Catholic burial ground his name appears with the note, "Executed for a crime which he was not guilty of," but there must be some mistake in the date, as from the entry he would seem to have been buried two days before he was executed.

Under the date of February 14, 1803, there is an entry of the burial at St James's of a negress called Mary. Of her it is said that "after she had served" her master "faithfully for more than forty years, and for fifteen had set an illustrious example of every virtue to the Catholics" of Winchester, she died and was thus buried. A fervent hope is expressed that "she may have had her purgatory in this world," but whether this is meant to be a reflection on the temper of her master or not does not appear.

Enough and more than enough has been said to indicate the interesting and valuable contents of this first volume issued by the Catholic Record Society. If its future publications only maintain the high standard reached by this, the Society will have deserved the thanks of Catholics generally, and of the historians and genealogists in particular. The promise could hardly have been greater; and it remains for Catholics who are proud of the sufferings and trials of their forefathers for the sake of religion and in vindication of the rights of conscience, to give the new Society their best wishes and, what is more important, their cordial support.

REPORT TO CARDINAL MORONI N. d. [? May, 1561.]

[The original autograph of this document is in the Vatican Archives, Arm. LXIV, vol. 28, folios 252 to 274. It is here printed from a transcript made by Father Joseph Stevenson, S.J., which has also been collated with the copy among the Bliss Transcripts at the Record Office. Stevenson's transcript was lent to the late Father T. E. Bridgett, C.SS.R., while preparing his True Story of the Catholic Hierarchy deposed by Queen Elizabeth, 1899, and he wrote of it as follows in his preface: "In this valuable document, still unprinted and hitherto, I believe, unused, Sander tells what he had himself seen and what he had ascertained from the relation of others.* There are a few inaccuracies in his narrative, as there always will be when a man tries to write down from memory the public events of which he has been an eye-witness, or in which he has been an actor. He will not always observe the exact order of events, or may attribute to one a speech made by another. To any one who shall write a full history of the Reformation this authentic report of Sander's will be indispensable."

Father Bridgett drew up in MS. a short list of the inaccuracies which he had in view, and his comments have been quoted in notes below, under his initial B. The translation is from the pen of the late Francis R. Ward, Esq.]

Anthérus papa et martyr non contentus hoc scire quod pro Christo plurimi vita defuncti essent, gesta eorum diligenter exquisivit, eiusque exemplum secutus item Papa et martyr Eutichianus trecentos quadraginta duos martyres propriis manibus sepelivit, multique deinceps Romani Pontifices rationem vitæ ac mortis eorum literis memoriæ mandandam curaverunt, judicavi ego te quoque Ill^me^ Cardinalis Morone, eorundem vestigiis inhærentem, præter communem notitiam de episcoporum Angliæ constantia etiam gesta particularia causasque singulorum non illibenter audire velle. Nam cum ipsa nomina vinctorum a me petiisses, cogitabam multo magis dicta ipsorum factaque grata tibi fore ac jucunda. Quomodo enim si hæc ejusmodi sunt, ut a Deo numerentur in cœlis, certaque merces eorum singulis reponatur, eadem a nobis in hac lachrimarum valle non omni memoria, non omni prædicatione digna censeantur? cedens Elizabetha Catholicum quemque e senatu ejicere Lutheranos autem in eundem co-optare cepisset, neque obscurum deinceps cuique esset quid in animo de religione fixum ac statutum haberet, parvus ille grex episcoporum non baculo solum suo sed etiam luminibus orbatus, tacite in Deum se projiciens, eundem nobis tunc præsentibus animi sensum representare visus est, qui quondam in ecclesia Romana fuisset, cum, BB. apostolis Petro et Paulo eodem die martyrio coronatis, reliquorum perniciei sævissimus hostis Nero immineret. Quid etiam quod eodem exemplo sese inter se consolati dicebant, in utroque Deum palam facere voluisse quod sua veritas nec Romæ a Petro et Paulo nec in Anglia penderet a Reginaldo Polo et Maria. Fecerunt autem quod in tali tempore viri perfectissimi facere debuerunt, ut in conciones ubique prorumperent, fidemque Ecclesiæ sanctæ suam, ac majorum suorum, principibus omnique plebi testificarentur. Itaque et doctor Scotus Cestrensis episcopus et doctor Bainus Lichfildiensis ita de unitate Ecclesiæ, de sacrosancta Eucharistia, de principatu Romani Pontificis disseruerunt, ut nihil potuerit dici vehementius, nihil ad rem causamque illam accommodatius. Processit in publicum paulo post doctor Vitus, Vintoniensis episcopus, qui cum videret omnia retro ferri atque in pejus ruere, præsentibus propter solemne funus reginæ Mariæ totius regni primatibus audacter ac (253) libere prædicavit tum eadem quæ illi alteri, tum præterea se constitutum in specula, ut videret ne quid detrimenti Ecclesia Christi caperet. Certiorem autem se redditum esse luporum e Geneva rabiem appropinquare; iis ut ne quisquam crederet, neve usuram audientiæ præberet, per salutem animarum suarum, per gloriam futuræ patriæ, per divini Nominis contestationem, gravissime deprecabatur. Quæ oratio sic affecit omnium animos, ut unus ex principibus qui aderant, finita jam concione, palam diceret, si in locum infernorum vellent sese ipsi præcipitare, ejus tamen immersionis hunc pontificem non modo non auctorem sed neque permissorem, quod in ipso esset, futurum. Et illi quidem hæc publice.

Interim ne ulla ratio ipsorum officii prætermitteretur, doctor Hethus, archiepiscopus Eboracensis, omnium qui hoc tempore in Anglia sunt et prudentissimus et optimus, de fratrum suorum communi sententia, Elizabetham adivit, cujus a conciliis adhuc fuit, vel quia non potuit vir sapientissimus supremo cancellarii munere tam caste atque integre functus sine reginæ ipsius infamia removeri, vel etiam ut eo beneficio facilius eum a Catholica fide ad suas partes alliceret atque invitaret. Is ergo reginam sic tunc remotis arbitris allocutus dicitur, ut in genua se provolvens, lachrimis plenus, per interpositum Jesu Christi Nomen rogaret, ne sacris mysteriis manum mulier admovere vellet. Se per omnes scholæ gradus ad summum honoris fastigium ascendentem, cum et sub patre suo (253[b]) Henrico et sub fratre Edouardo episcopus, et sub sorore Maria archiepiscopus et regni cancellarius fuisset, præter studiorum rationem provecta jam ætate usu ipso expertum esse, quantum mali reipublicæ proveniret ex frequente etiam legum judicialium mutatione, quo minus idem in religione tentari debere, ubi summa commendatio solet esse anti-quitatis testimonium. Jam vero id tentari non in aliqua ceremonia sed in summis mysteriis fidei, quæ magis (ut ipsum mysterii nomen docet) tacita quadam admiratione colenda quam disceptatione populari agitanda forent, tanta inquam sacramenta in quæstionem post tot annorum spatia vocare, et in eo regno vocare unde per manifestum Dei miraculum non ita pridem schisma sublatum sit, quomodo non ipsi reginæ grave, non civibus molestum, non toti reipublicæ periculosum videretur? Ac veniam quidem clement^mam^ principem sibi dare oportere, quoniam ista dicere multorum officiorum ratione teneretur. Nam nec principi suo deesse in re tam necessaria suum consiliarium, nec Eboracensi ecclesiæ ipsius episcopum, nec toti regno solum jam superstitem archiepiscopum debere. "Si ergo (quod tamen, inquit, Deus omen avertat) sed si funesta in hoc regno religionis eversio contigerit, moneo, prædico, ante denuncio, me neque latum quidem unquam in re quantumvis minima ab Ecclesiæ catholicæ decretis recessurum, eaque in causa omnibus et cæterorum et reginæ ipsius consiliis omni meo conatu ac studio usque ad ultimum vitæ meæ tempus restiturum."

Quæ postquam dixisset, regina reverendum patrem, statim a principio erigere se jussum, pluribus in fine verbis consolata, (254) nihil se facturam asseverabat quod non multis prudentissimis viris (in quibus ipsum primas tenere confitebatur) imo quod toti regno in comitiis collecto non probaretur.

Venerant jam e Geneva in Angliam lupi rapacissimi, et ita venerant ut omnia hereticæ factionis instrumenta studiosissime fabrefacta secum ipsi portarent. Ecce in primis, Novum Testamentum in vulgarem linguam translatum. E Geneva usque est hoc. Ecce deinde officia ecclesiastica, non cogitata solum qualia futura essent, sed jam impressa et typis excusa. Ecce denique communes quosdam locos ad evertendum plebis animos e scripturis sanctis misere expressos. Caput autem in his articulis erat illa pluribus ante annis præmeditata quæstio rectene officia ecclesiastica in ignota populo lingua celebrarentur. Et quoniam in ea controversia regnare se arbitrabantur, egerunt apud suæ factionis consiliarios, ut quasdam disputationes publicas instituerent, in quibus Lutherani judices considentes facile secundum hæreticos sententiam ferrent. Quid multis? Admoniti sunt episcopi ut sese ad disputationes sexto deinceps die præpararent. Illi autem boni viri se tutos præscriptione legitimi temporis adversus quemcunque petitorem responderunt. Hanc enim religionem in qua ipsi manerent memoria patrum et majorum suorum pro catholica receptam sine ulla contradictione semper fuisse. Nolle igitur se partes actorum suscipere, quasi de jure suo incertos; sed contra, possessores cum essent, aliorum esse officium, ut si quid juris sibi esse in ecclesiæ instituta contenderent, id apud judicem legitimum probare deberent, qui judex quamquam adhuc ignoraretur, (254^b^) se tamen causæ suæ non diffidentes in potestate senatus futuros.

Lutheranorum ergo articuli proponuntur:

1. Officia ecclesiastica in ignota lingua celebrari est contra expressum Dei verbum, et contra consuetudinem antiquæ Ecclesiæ.

2. In Sacramento Eucharistiæ non transubstantiatur panis in corpus, nec vinum in sanguinem Christi.

3. Missa non est sacrificium propitiatorium pro vivis et defunctis.

Dum hæ conclusiones ostenduntur, dies unus præterit. Postridie convenientes Catholici, eligunt ex instituto scholarum quem pro ipsis oporteret quæstionem defendere. Elegerunt vero doctorem Colum, decanum D. Pauli apud Londinum. Tertio demum die quæri cœptum est in qua lingua disputaretur, nam cum Lutherani vellent in vulgari, Catholici a regina postularunt ut Latine potius id fieret. Cumque impetrasse visi essent, rursus die quarto admonentur in vulgari omnia esse tractanda; jam cœperunt intelligere Catholici nihil aliud agi quam ut assidua singularum rerum mutatione opprimerentur adhuc imparati. Postremo eo die quo disputandum erat, a Catholicis quæritur, haberenturne illa scripta quæ proposituri essent. Illi dicebant valde quidem sibi placere, ut, quæ in disputationibus dici contingeret, vitandæ calumniæ causa in scriptum redigerentur; arbitrati scilicet hoc a certis notariis præsentibus fieri debere.

Die dicta in scholam utraque pars prodit. Considerent ex adverso quatuor episcopi cum totidem doctoribus, et octo Lutherani. Judex tribunal occupat. Lutheranus ipse (255) insignis, homo non tam nobilis quam notus, regii sigilli custos. Ei consiliarii assident, inter quos erat Archiepiscopus Eboracensis. Judex dicere Catholicos jubet quæ ad rem facere putarent. Colus non tam se ut doceret aiebat venisse, quam ut quæ ab adversariis dicerentur ea refutaret. Sic enim convenisse ut Catholici eo die defenderent, linguam Latinam qua in officiis ecclesiasticis nostra Ecclesia utitur, quamvis populo ignota sit, non tamen esse contra expressum Dei verbum aut contra consuetudinem antiquæ Ecclesiæ. Quæ controversia, quoniam duplex caput haberet, de singulis breviter quid sentiret ex more se dicturum.

Ac de primo capite, in quo negatur usum ignotæ linguæ contra expressum Dei verbum esse, quia simplex negatio sit, hoc tantum dici posse id ab adversariis nunquam probatum iri; neque vero eam vim in Apostoli verbis (1 Cor. xiv) quam illi arbitrarentur. Quod in disputationibus, inquit, manifestius apparebit.

"Ad secundum porro caput, in quo negamus ignotæ linguæ usum contra consuetudinem antiquæ Ecclesiæ esse, hoc interim respondeo, antiquam Ecclesiam necessario intelligi eam quæ ab ipsis Apostolis incœpta subsequentium annorum spatiis continuata sit. Eam igitur duplicem ab initio fuisse; Græcorum unam, alteram Latinorum. Illam alias Orientalem appellatam; hanc autem Occidentalem. Jam ipsa, inquit, nominatio Græcæ Latinæque ecclesiæ, quid aliud quam duas nobis linguas in iis usitatas proponit? Etiam Græca ecclesia erat quæ in officiis Græca lingua utebatur, (255[b]) Latina etiam, in cujus officiis adhibebatur Latina lingua. Et, ut in re fuisse probetur, quod in nomine dicitur, omnes Christi ecclesias singulis in regionibus animo perlustrate, non reperietis, neque in Hispania, neque in Galliis, neque in Germania, ullam linguam post institutam religionem in officiis publice adhibi-tam præter Latinam. Fuerat enim cum Græca et Hebræa in titulo Crucis Christi sanctificata. Sanctas enim res non nisi sancta decet lingua, et quemadmodum per parentum nostrorum rebellionem apud turrim Babel unica illa prior lingua in plures divisa fuit, sic istæ plures per humilitatem Jesu Christi ad pauciores redactæ sacro Trinitatis mysterio in unitate fidei per totum terrarum orbem deserviunt.

"Remota, inquit, prosequor. Quid in hac Anglicana Ecclesia? Ullane lingua in officiis recepta fuit præter Latinam? Successionem episcoporum tenemus ab Augustino usque et Mileto, quos in Angliam Gregorius primus docendi Evangelii causa misit. Hi episcopi hanc linguam in his officiis majoribus nostris quasi de manu in manum tradiderunt. Quod si mille anni ad præscriptionem legitimam sufficiunt, non est, opinor, hæc lingua tam antiqua contra antiquæ Ecclesiæ consuetudinem. Hanc cum religione accepimus, hujus igitur, nisi Christianæ quoque religionis pudeat, pudere nos non debet. Jam, inquit, expecto adversariorum in contrarium argumenta, quibus cum respondero, tum palam fiet (256) quam vera hæc sint quæ asserui."

Hic moderator Catholicos interrogavit an haberent aliquid aliud quod pro se allaturi essent in ea quæstione. Illi negabant se aliud quippiam ante disputationem dicturos; unicam enim præfationem sufficere. Datus ergo locus est Lutheranis.

Illi more suo fucato in genua sua procidentes precari cœperunt. Idem faciebat judex, consiliarii, auditores pæne omnes. Unus archiepiscopus Eboracensis neque de tribunali descendit, neque caput aperuit aut labia, sed erectus immotusque, considens,* canonem antiquum Laodiceni concilii (1 q. 1 c. "Non oportet") † observavit, prohibentem hæreticorum benedictiones accipere aut cum illis orare; quod factum ejus episcopi et doctores Catholici secuti sunt.

Finitis maledictionibus, prodit Horneus quidam (quod nomen apud nostrates a cornu deducitur) et prolato libro cœpit de scripto recitare longam ex præmeditatione orationem de officiis ecclesiasticis in vulgari lingua celebrandis. Summa rei hæc fuit; Paulum scripsisse Corinthiis orandum psallendumque esse et spiritu et mente, id est, ita ut intelligatur quod psallitur, nam alioqui "supplens locum idiotæ quomodo dicet Amen, super tuam benedictionem, quoniam quid dicas nescit?" Item, "quoties convenitis, omnia ad ædificationem fiant." Addebat præterea orasse patres in primitiva ecclesia in lingua vulgari. Denique secus qui facerent eos non solum in jus divinum et ecclesiasticum peccare, verum etiam in ipsum jus naturæ.

Cumque perorasset, episcopi (quod hoc omnia vice proemii esse putarent) argumenta in syllogismi formam collecta expectabant. At moderator, quod erat inter ipsum et Lutheranos constitutum, postulabat utriusque partis orationem sibi dari. "Quam" inquiunt (256[b]) Catholici, "orationem? Nam quod Colus dixit non quasi totam rem explicaturus dixit, sed tantum declarandæ quæstionis causa, ut in disputationum principio fieri solet." "Nihil ergo habetis in hoc argumento scriptum?" Cumque respondissent episcopi de scripto disputari non solere, atqui sic inter ipsos convenisse moderator intulit, episcopi fatebantur scriptionis factam esse mentionem, sed hoc sic ab ipsis intellectum, tanquam argumenta post ipsorum recitationem in scriptum referri deberent, ac non ut omnia in concionis modum continua oratione dicerentur. Ridens judex exprobrantisque speciem præ se ferens, quasi jam vicisset, scribere Catholicos jubet quæ dixissent, quæve dicturi essent. Illi spatium ad hoc dari, simulque adversariorum orationem sibi edi postulabant. Dati sunt dies duo ad scribendum ea quæ ipsis viderentur in eodem argumento, et ut postea orationes utrarumque partium invicem adversariis traderentur convenit. Jubebat præterea, ut de secunda quæstione in eundem diem cogitarent. Ita est prima dies clausa sine ulla disputatione.

Hoc igitur biduo Catholici (cura secundæ quæstionis mandata Joanni Harpsfildo, Londinensi Archidiacono) ea collegerunt argumenta, quæ usum linguæ Latinæ in officiis ecclesiasticis et antiquum probarent, nec a verbo Dei abhorrentem. Sua die ad locum præstitutum reversi jubentur in secunda quæstione agere. Mirari episcopi, qui habebant quidem quod in secunda dicerent, sed non nisi prima finita, debere ad secundam deveniri judicabant. Ac primum supplices deprecabantur, uti, quoniam Lutherani suam superstitionem palam (257) pronunciassent, ex qua re populus in schisma perduci posset, sic etiam sibi liceret quæ jam attulissent scripta, eadem publice recitare. Judex, si quid scriptum haberent, ut hoc apud se deponerent permisit, non autem ut eo loco aut die id legerent; oportere enim illo tempore de secunda quæstione agi. "Agetur," Catholici respondent, "si tamen prima sit prius expedita. Neque vero præcipitare tantam rem oportet, aut integrum nobis est causam Christi et Ecclesiæ isto modo prodere." Stomachari moderator et surrecturum se fingere, cum subito assedit et singulos interrogat vellentne agere in secunda quæstione, an non? Primus inter episcopos qui disputaturi erant, sedit Wintoniensis, qui assurgens rogabat, si non permitteretur ipsis legere quæ scripsissent, saltem ut posset loqui pauca quæ ipse cogitasset. Judex dicebat, "extra secundæ quæstionis argumentum non loqueris aliquid." Cogitaverat vero gravissimus pater non solum de injusto judice verum etiam de seipsis conqueri, quod præter Catholicam traditionem cum hæreticis disputare voluissent, cum illis præsertim qui tot monitiones totque correptiones Ecclesiæ sanctæ pastorumque ejus neglexissent; postremo quod sub eo moderatore cum illis agerent, qui vehementior * in sua secta quoquam illorum esset; in illo tamen condonari sibi oportere quod non eo venissent, ut de re quasi dubia quærerent, sed ut animos reginæ ac senatus, quos ipsi dubios fatebantur, confirmarent. Sed quia omnia hæc dicere non licuit, (257[b]) interrogationi moderatoris in hunc modum respondit, se non posse tantum præjudicii Catholicæ fidei afferre, ut, responsione ad argumenta hæreticorum omissa, ad alia progrederetur. Interrogatus deinde Lincolniensis, "Et quæ," inquit, "æquitas est hæc, aut quæ disputationis vicissitudo, ut unius partis argumenta quiete audiantur, altera vero pars nihil omnino respondere permittatur? Jamque etiam hoc adjungitur ut nos ipsi huic tantæ injuriæ assentiamus; quod equidem non faciam." Tum Lichfildiensis episcopus, "Disputaturis," inquit, "necessarium est ut saltem in certis principiis inter se conveniant, alioquin contra negantem omnia, nunquam recte instituetur disputatio. Ut igitur certius disputare possimus, ego ab istis quærerem (quoniam ex nobis se non esse fatentur, imo nos oppugnant) ex qua tandem schola sint? Utrum se Lutheranos profiteantur, an Zwinglianos, an etiam Anabaptistas, aut denique ex triginta sectis quæ in Germania crescunt quam potissimam sibi arrogent? Quod cum fecerint, sciemus et nos quæ principia concedant, et ex quibus redargui queant." Quæ cum pater doctissimus in sancta ira diceret, moderator ad quæstionem jussit eum respondere. "Respondebo," inquit, "idem quod fecerunt fratres mei ante me." Ordine igitur cæteri Catholici eodem modo responderunt præter unum Fecnamium, abbatem Westmonasterii; nam ille affirmabat esse quidem injustum hoc quod postulabatur, verumtamen ita se educatum, ut hæreticum timere nunquam posset, itaque non recusare quin disputaret in secunda quæstione, a quo judicio cæteri merito dissentiebant, quia idem illis in secunda videbatur expectandum quod in prima fuissent experti.

(258) Ita dissolutis comitiis episcopi et doctores Catholici paulo post in carcerem omnes conjecti sunt, multaque illis indicta, quod non obedissent moderatori tam egregio, qui argumentorum dissolvendorum quendam modum excogitasset, non qualem Aristoteles aut Plato, sed qualem Alexander Magnus invenerat cum Gordii nodum ferro non ingenio dissecavit.

Die Parlamenti jam appropinquante, coronari prius reginam atque inungi oportuit. Quod cum facere archiepiscopus recusasset, quia intelligebat in ea re schismatice aliquid factum iri, post multos frustra in eum finem rogatos, tandem Carleolensis episcopus eam functionem suscepit; non quod hæresi faveret, sed ne regina, indignata si a nemine ungeretur, eo facilius religionem everteret. Neque vero tam desperatæ adhuc res erant, quin posse illam a proposito deflecti multi sperarent. Unctioni vero cæteri episcopi tamdiu affuerunt donec aliquid de ritu antiquo Sacrificii Missæ immutatum videbant. Introduxerat quippe regina novum genus Missæ, ut hostia consecrata populo adoranda non proponeretur.

Cœpto autem Parlamento, episcopi, archidiaconi et archipresbyteri cum synodum eodem tempore convocassent, omnes hoc putarunt faciendum, ut laicis qui comitia tenebant, suas mentes ac sententias in certis rebus denunciarent. Scripserunt igitur quatuor conclusiones.

1. Se credere præsentiam realem et naturalem Corporis Christi in Eucharistia, idque pane in Corpus vino in Sanguinem transubstantiatis, eamque esse fidem Catholicam et secundum veritatem Evangelii.

2. Se credere Missam esse sacrificium propitiatorium pro vivis et defunctis.

(258b) 3. Se credere Pontificem Romanum esse caput Ecclesiæ et Vicarium Christi.

4. Laicos non debere sacras quæstiones tractare, et multo minus leges de eisdem ferre.

Quibus conclusionibus cum singuli subscripsissent ad comitia publica eas miserunt ut omnibus legerentur. At sigilli publici custos, Parlamenti præses, cum sciret eam rem suæ sectæ nocere posse, conclusiones retinuit nec unquam promulgari passus est.

Cum vero aliqua controversia de religione moveretur, protestatus est semper archiepiscopus Eboracensis illam quæstionem ejus loci non esse; debere talia in synodo non in comitiis, ab episcopis non a laicis agitari. Tum ordine singuli episcopi dicebant idem sibi videri, ac ne unus quidem ulla in re unquam dissentiit ab altero.

Gravissime autem post ipsum archiepiscopum in hoc toto genere perorarunt episcopi Winton, Lincoln, Lichfild, Cestrensis, et abbas Westmonasterii; qui nullum articulum passi sunt præterire quem non ita persequerentur, ut nunquam ipsorum orationibus responderi potuerit. Erat res inaudita, cum nihil habuerint laici quod in ulla causa possent dicere, cumque in episcopis admirari se et ingenium et doctrinam faterentur, tamen semper ab eisdem eos dissentire, non aliam ob rem quam quod aliud reginæ gratum esse intelligerent.

Illud autem accidit insigne in illis comitiis. Russellus quidam comes Bedfordiæ, qui Romæ fuerat ante annos paucos, tanta convitia Sedi Apostolicæ fecit, ut diceret illam esse omnium scelerum sentinam et receptaculum malitiæ; cumque in oratione concaluisset, neque vellet videri sine testibus loqui, extento brachio Antonium Brunum, baronem clarissimum, qui cum episcopo Eliensi legatus Romam venerat, suorum dictorum testem citat, ac nominatim ab eo quærit (259) si, Romæ cum esset, meretrix non sit ad cubiculi sui fores delata, idque per unum ex cardinalibus. Erubescere Antonius cœpit vehementiusque perturbari, erat enim vir optimus, et cum paucis aliis ita Catholicus ut nulli schismaticæ decisioni in illis comitiis assenserit; qui præterea toti Parlamento testatus antea fuerat, quomodo apud Sedem Apostolicam cum esset Pontifici promisisset, illud regnum nunquam iterum a sua obedientia et fide Catholica recessurum, ac propterea si cœteri fidem publice datam servare nollent, se tamen suo verbo privatim deesse non posse. Perturbatum Russellus videns eo acrius urget, ut respondeat, si vere Cardinalis meretricem ei obtulisset. Hoc enim erat vulgatum in ore hæreticorum, atque id pro vero habebant. Antonius toties provocatus tandem surrexit, multisque verbis conquestus est quod cogeretur aut mentiri aut alterius quem coleret honorem lædere. Bene habebat. Jam cœperant sperare pessimi quique hoc de honore Papæ dictum esse. Sed "quoniam," inquit Antonius, "publice provocor, ubi falso aliquid dicere turpissimum sit, fatendum est a multis me cardinalibus magna beneficia singularesque benevolentiæ significationes accepisse, meretricem vero neque obtulit eorum quispiam neque verbum aut suspicionem de tali re fecit; atque unde hoc iste comes audiverit nescio, sed testificor vobis coram Deo et Angelis ejus me quod verum est dixisse."

Russellus quid loqueretur aut quomodo taceret non habebat, sed præclare accidit, non enim honorem, etiamsi millies mentitus esset (259[b]), perdere potuit, quem aut nunquam habuit aut multis ante annis perdidisset. Sed revertamur ad parlamentum, cujus prima lex est, ut nihil ratum esse possit quod ibi libere non decernatur a tribus his ordinibus; ab ordine spiritali qui est episcoporum omnium et certorum abbatum; ab ordine baronum temporalium qui sunt duces, marchiones, comites, vice-comites usque ad simplices barones; ab ordine plebeiorum, qui sunt ex civitatibus et præcipuis oppidis, duumviri, præter singulorum comitatuum equites et præfectos.

Cum igitur ad suffragia veniendum esset, ac neque unus unquam episcopus aut abbas contra Catholicam religionem verbum diceret, ac propterea unus ordo totus de illa mutanda non consentiret, certum est non modo impias et iniquas esse leges quæ nunc proponuntur in Anglia, sed neque leges quidem esse omnino, neque unquam in parlamento revocari eas necesse esse quæ per auctoritatem parlamenti latæ non sunt, sed tantum tyrannice a paucis contra leges parlamenti constitutæ. Utcumque quando quod regina volebat de religione cautum erat, oportebat secundum illam tyrannidem aut post certum tempus consentire aut dignitate spoliari. Spoliati sunt episcopi omnes præter unum Landaffensem. Cumque anno sequente libertas eis promitteretur, si tantum schismaticis officiis, etiam absque communicandi necessitate, interesse vellent, eadem constantia, qua dignitatem antea, nunc quoque libertatem recusarunt.

Hactenus de iis quæ communiter gesta sunt, nunc autem singulorum dicta factaque narrabo, saltem quæ me audire contigit. Finis.

PRIMO agam de iis episcopis et decanis quos in custodia publica mori contigit, tum de iis qui adhuc in carcere detinentur, si tamen illud ex D. Cipriani epistolis præmisero l.iii, ep. 6.

"Corporibus" inquit "omnium (qui etsi torti non sunt in carcere, tamen glorioso exitu mortis excedunt) impertiatur et vigilantia et cura propensior; neque enim virtus eorum aut honor minor est quo minus ipsi quoque inter beatos martyres aggregentur: quod in illis est toleraverunt, quicquid tolerare parati aut prompti fuerunt: et qui se tormentis et morti sub oculis Dei obtulit, passus est quicquid pati voluit; non enim ipse tormentis, sed tormenta ipsi defuerunt.

coram hominibus et ego in illo confitebor coram patre meo qui in cœlis est.' Confessi sunt. Dicit dominus (Mar. c. 10), 'qui toleraverit usque in finem hic salvus erit.' Toleraverunt, et ad finem usque incorrupta et immaculata virtutum suarum merita pertulerunt. Et iterum scriptum est (Apoc. c. 2), 'esto fidelis usque ad mortem et dabo tibi coronam vitæ.' Usque ad mortem fideles et stabiles et inexpugnabiles perseveraverunt. Cum voluntati nostræ et confessioni in carcere et vinculis accedit moriendi terminus, consummata martyris gloria est.

"Denique et dies eorum, quibus excedunt, annotate, ut commemorationes eorum inter memorias martyrum celebrare possimus.' Hactenus Ciprianus, ex cujus verbis conjicere possumus non confessorum tantum sed et martyrum gesta nos nunc in manibus habere. Unum molestum est quod peregre cum essemus, dies eorum non potuimus annotare.

Joannes Christoforsonus, episcopus Cicestrensis. Is quanquam non erat apprehensus a satellitibus, neque in vincula ductus, quia tamen religionem immutandam prospiciens eo animo fuit ut mori pro fide cuperet, certe a nobis prætermitti non debuit. Fuit autem vir tantæ doctrinæ, ut cum multa ex Philone Judæo, tum Ecclesiasticam Historiam Eusebii totam, in linguam Latinam felicissime converterit. Qui cum R^mi^ Cardinalis Poli beatum funus prosequeretur, domum rediit totus febricitans, neque illam postea infirmitatem depellere unquam potuit. Corpus igitur suum videns dissolvi, ob cæteras, inquit, causas nihil video cur velim vivere. Unum est animo meo longe acerbissimum quod partem hujus tempestatis quæ fratribus meis pro religione imminet, mihi quoque sustinere cum illis non licebit. His dictis, beatus exspiravit.

SI sacra mens et mors efficiunt martyrem,

Oglethorpus, Carleolensis episcopus. Cum moris esset ut in festo Natalis Christi episcoporum aliquis in regia capella sacrum faceret, ad eamque paratus Carliolensis ante altare constitisset, ecce, duo viri allegantur a regina qui ne Hostiam consecratam elevet prohiberent. Is obstupefactus rei novitate, tamen audacter dixit, deberetne apud illud altare Missam facere, annon, hoc in potestate reginæ esse. At quo ritu et quibus cerimoniis deberet eam facere, hoc se, (261) qui episcopus esset, probe scire nec immutare aliquid velle. Cumque nuncii discessissent, cœpit celebrare, peregitque omnia more antiquo. Sed regina tanti sacramenti adorationem non ferens, post lectum Evangelium abierat, Missa (credo) Catechumenorum contenta quæ catechumenæ loco non erat digna. Hanc insignem Carleolensis gloriam maculavit postea ejusdem reginæ co-ronatio. Nam quod cæteri episcopi fere omnes detrectaverant, nescio qua spe deceptus, faciendum sibi judicavit, arbitrans forte isto humanitatis officio mitigari animum reginæ posse, ut non tam serio de innovandis ritibus cogitaret. Utcumque fuerit, pontificia dignitate ob confessionem fidei exutus atque in vincula conjectus mirum animi dolorem ob coronatam reginam omnibus contestabatur, atque adeo inde acceleratam esse diem beatæ mortis multi existimarunt.

EPITAPHIUM

CARLEOLUM quid agis? dum das per scisma coronam
perdes coronam gloriæ.
Si deflebo datam: possum si mihi rettulit idem
recuperare perditam.
Corpus enim Christi qui vult extollere, Christus
Hunc deprimi nunquam sinet.
Exemploque tuo felix, quem non pudet illi
Cultum exhibere corpori.

Rodulphus Bainus, Lichfildiensis episcopus. Hic linguam Hebraicam Parisiis magna cum laude professus, commentarios doctissimos in Salomonis Proverbia scripsit. Idem consecratus episcopus tanta fuit in hac persecutione animi constantia (261[b]) ut ad examinationem semper lætus accederet, recederet autem lætior. Depositus autem et sub vadibus dismissus, cum in cathedra quadam sederet æger ac dolens, audivit vocem dicentem sibi "bono animo esto, martyrium enim patieris." Rem ipse dum viveret testibus fide dignissimis narrasse fertur, non explicans tamen quod genus martyrii futurum esset. Fuit autem tale. Decumbens ex intestinorum dolore tantam difficultatem reddendæ urinæ passus est ut sex dies continuos nihil emiserit. Cumque dolores astantibus (inter quos erat episcopus Cestrensis et Decanus Divi Pauli) nimium intolerabiles viderentur, non ingemuit unquam, sed oculis partim ad cœlum partim ad Crucifixum elevatis, nomen Jesu repetiit usque ad ultimum beati spiritus exitum. Huic igitur viro neque sua tormenta defuerunt, quo minus ex omni parte pro martyre possit annotari.

EPITAPHIUM

QUO te Baine pater confers? Num quæris Iesum?
At vivo præsens hic tibi semper erat.
Hic nisi tentato solatia magna tulisset,
Per te qui poteras vincere tanta mala?
At neque vicissem, dices, nisi mortuus essem,
Qui vivit, nescit victor an esse queat.
Jam tandem sensi, sequeris tu victor Iesum,
Nec nisi qui certat victor abire potest.
Ergo ubi te quæram novi: suspiria sume
Nostra, precesque Deo funde, benigne pater.

Cuthbertus Tunstallus, Dunelmensis episcopus. Cum de arithmetica insignem librum juvenis edidisset, senex autem alium de veritate Corporis Christi in Sacramento Altaris, jam tandem decrepitus, tametsi ejus ætati vacatio data esset, ne ad Parlamentum necesse haberet venire, non modo venit festinato, sed etiam contra interdictum reginæ in itinere prædicans plebem suam exhortatus est ut in fide Catholica constans perseveraret. Idem ubi ad conspectum reginæ productus esset sanctissimus pater severius eam cœpit increpare quod religionis negotium in manus mulier sumeret, quodque episcopis ejusmodi se spoliasset cujusmodi orbis Christianus vix haberet. Tum illa "Fateor" inquit "dolere me de Eboracensi et Eliensi." "At quomodo," inquit Tonstallus, "doles cum huic malo mederi queas? Si vis Catholica esse, potes non modo illos habere a conciliis, verum alios præterea multos." Idem a senatu admonitus ut sententiam de religione mutaret, "Cum fidem," inquit, "publice docuerim presbyter et pontifex annis amplius quadraginta, æquum putatis ut post tanta studia, post tantum usum et experientiam in extrema jam senectute regulam fidei a junioribus laicis accipiam?" Erubescere illi, et juramentum de primatu reginæ offerre cœperunt, quo recusato depositus est ab administratione pontificatus et custodiæ Cantuariensis pseudo-episcopi commissus, ubi post paucos dies expiravit beatissimus senex, non ob aliud, ut mihi videtur, tamdiu vivens quam ut qui confessor sæpe antea extitisset tandem moreretur martyr.

EPITAPHIUM

CUR tantum properas, O nimium senex?
Dunelmi licuit vivere splendide.
Londini quid agis? Candida te fides
In molli thalamo stertere non sinit.
Illa est illa fides quæ iuvenescere
Fecit sancta senis membra trementia,
Quam cum concilio principis impiæ
Confessus fueras Catholicus pater,
Et iam deposito pontificis gradu
Constans in rigido carcere degeres.
Commendas manibus mox animam Dei,
In cœlo cathedram pontificis tenens.

Joannes Whitus, Wintoniensis episcopus, ingenio tam elegante fuit ut infinita scripserit epigrammata. Edidit librum sub titulo Dyacosio Martyrion, quod in eo ducenta Patrum testimonia pro veritate corporis Christi in Eucharistia contulisset. Sub Edouardo VI in carcerem fidei causa conjectus, propterea duplicem a Maria honorem accepit, de Lincolniensi cathedra translatus ad Vintoniensem. Gloriante quodam nobili quod saltem episcopus Landaffensis ad Lutheranorum factionem transisset, "Quid," inquit, "unicum mente captum in ordine nostro esse non licet, quin vos eum vindicetis!" In carcerem bis ab Elizabetha impositus, posteaque dignitate spoliatus et sub fidejussorum sponsione ad certum locum relegatus, in febrim quatriduanam incidit, ex qua cum usque ad mortem laborare se videret, fidem publice professus, jussit corpus in ecclesia

Wintoniensi inter suos majores honeste sepeliri; voluitque ut in sepulchro inscriberetur " Hic est Joannes Vitus, qui partem in ultima resurrectione sperat se cum prædecessoribus suis episcopis acceptu-rum, quia eorum fidem retinuit, eamque suis omnibus tenendam commendavit."

EPITAPHIUM

Tu puerum quondam docuisti, maxime Vite,
Sanderum: præses rexisti, et pastor eundem.
Quid tibi Sanderus referet? Quæ premia reddet?
Non ego, Vite, breves elegos dabo, quod tibi longam
Esse scio vitam. Quisnam deflere beatum
Posset? Longum ergo et lætum simul accipe carmen.
Candidus alma volat Vitus super astra, canitque
Dulce suo Christo carmen, non carmen iniquum,
Quod nunc dactilico pede, nunc incedit iambo,
Sed quale aut Moyses facie splendente beatus,
Aut chorus angelicus sacrata nocte canebat,
Gloria in excelsis clamans, sit gloria Patri,
Gloria sit Nato, et sanctum tibi gloria Flamen;
Unus es et trinus, sit trino gloria et uni.

(263) De iis Decanis quos in custodia mortuos accepimus.

Rainoldus, Exoniensis ecclesiæ Decanus. Vel ex hoc viro conjecturam sumere possumus quid sit de cæteris episcopis et gloriosis confessoribus cogitandum. Quod enim hunc in ipso schismatis initio dicentem audivi, hoc idem non dubito reliquis omnibus ob oculos quotidie propositum fuisse. Nam cum ad eum invisendi causa me contulissem, ita mecum remotis arbitris vir sapientissimus locutus est. "Providentiam," iniquit, "Dei erga suos negare semper fuisset hominis mali, nunc autem eandem ultro non confiteri erit et ingrati et impii. Ad nostram quippe utilitatem hoc schisma Deus operatus est. Nam primum annis viginti continuis ab ecclesia divisos, pastori nos per Mariam reginam restituit. Deinde cum luxuriare iterum cœpissemus, jamque honoribus ambiendis et opibus cumulandis dediti essemus, quam principem Catholicorum causa Deus dedit, eandem quando ipsis oberat Catholicis, idem Deus et sibi et nobis abstulit. Sibi, quia erat mulier valde bona, nobis, quia sub illa fuissemus pejores. Denique venit nunc Elizabeta, non illa quidem sibi sed nobis tantummodo profutura. Ex persecutionibus enim crescere, proprium est Ecclesiæ Dei." Atque hic apprehensa manu, "O," inquit, "felices nos si hoc intelligimus, qui enim jam jam morituri per naturam poteramus de salute animarum nostrarum timere, possumus nunc, ex necessario malo bonum summe voluntarium elicientes, non modo eam purgare maculam quam sub Henrico Octavo, abiurato pastore, incurrebamus, verum etiam per gloriosam Catholicæ fidei confessionem altiorem quoque in celo mereri locum." Non potuit dici, quantum me illius viri gravis oratio consolabatur: audieram alios conquerentes, quod in tristissimis temporibus his nati essent, in quibus ecclesiam Dei vide-rent undique laceratam, et videbantur sane mihi non tantum prudenter, set et pie loqui, donec in apostolicum Rainoldi pectus incidens celestem quandam hausi sapientiam. Tum cœpi sentire quisnam sit ille fons aquæ vivæ salientis in vitam æternam.

(263[b]) Itaque ut opere compleret quod verbo dixerat, omnia primum abjicienda ratus quæ impedire martyrii gloriam possent, pecuniam, suppellectilem, bonaque omnia cognatis et pauperibus distribuit. Cumque Exonia 200 fere millibus passuum a Londino abesset, non (ut alii) expectavit donec vocaretur, nec in partes regni extremas, aut etiam trans mare se recepit, sed Londinum statim se contulit, ne forte abesset cum confiteri fidem oporteret. Ibi consolans infirmos, reprehendens timidos, in omni sermone tam prudens extitit, ut omni hominum generi plurimum prodesset. Vocatus vero tam gloriosam confessionem exhibuit ut beneficiis et dignitate privatus in carcerem includeretur. Simul ac jam venerat dies expectatus, vivere diutius vir sanctissimus non potuit; fructus enim maturus ad quid opus est, nisi ut in horreum celeste recondatur?

EPITAPHIUM

NON Rainolde tua est; sapientia numinis ista est
Velle mori vinctum, qui moriturus eras.

Stuardus, Vintoniensis Decanus, senex venerandus, quam confessionem fidei Catholicæ sub Edouardo VI inceperat, nunc eandem consummaturus, et depositus est a gradu, et evectus in cœlum.

EPITAPHIUM

CORDE fidem servans, confessus et ore coronam
Justitiæ geminam percipis, alme pater.

(264) Sethus Holandus, Wigorniensis Decanus, qui in schismate sub Edouardo VI Romæ fuerat, eandemque iterum nunc visitare cupiebat, in ipso fugæ apparatu captus, in carcerem conjectus, patriam quidem reliquit sed Romam non venit, quia cœlum utrique prætulit.

EPITAPHIUM

SETHE fugis frustra, si vis ut te fateatur
Christus, tu Christum confiteare prior.

Henricus Colus, Londinensis Decanus, vir beatior quam putabam, numeratus enim est a me inter confessores, ille vero erat martyr. Scripsi eum posterius inter viventes in terra, sed ille prius erat vivens in cœlo, quia erat mortuus in carcere, si tamen mortuus est.

EPITAPHIUM IN COLUM, SIVE VIVUM SIVE MORTUUM

COLE nihil fallis, nam te vivum numeravi
Et vere vivis; mors tua vita tibi est.
Cole nihil fallis; seu vivas seu moriaris,
Mortuus es mundo: vivis at usque Deo.

(264[b]) De iis episcopis qui adhuc in carcere detinentur.

Hethus, archiepiscopus Eboracensis tam venerandus pater vel ipsi Elizabethæ visus est, ut cum cancellarius regni esset, se (defuncta Maria) negaverit ab illo sigillum accepturam, nisi quia moris erat; in quo tametsi dissimulare videatur, quia statim poterat reddidisse, tamen hoc a multis recte animadversum est, quod in hunc usque diem nemo sit alius ad hoc officium electus, tantum loco cancellarii custos sigilli constituitur, et novus homo novo honorario titulo abutitur. Cum ad Eboracensem nondum custodia inclusum Illmus comes de Feria, Hispanus, accederet, interrogaretque, quid in isto rerum statu agere oporteret: "Agere," inquit, "nihil, pati autem quæcumque Deus volet." Sic decuit gloriosum confessorem etiam in persecutionibus hilarem esse. Idem neque reginam coronare neque juramentum primatus feminei suscipere volens, annoque jam uno et paucis mensibus post spoliationem modo libere dimissus, modo in vincula retractus, ex reginæ senatusque auctoritate facultatem oblatam habuit ubi vellet vivendi, si tamen se interfuturum officiis ecclesiasticis promitteret. Quam ille conditionem nullo pacto accipere voluit. "Et quare," inquit, "nolim, satis a me dictum senatus audivit sæpe in parlamento, quæ omnia possunt ad hanc summam referri. Quicquid est contra fidem Catholicam hæresis est; quicquid contra unitatem scisma est." Cumque visitatores objicerent, ut liberum foret non recipere communionem: "Idem," inquit, "est, quoad rationem scismatis, aliquam partem et ipsum totum facere. (265) Ac propterea non tantum nullo verbo, sed neque facto aliquo meo quippiam eorum quæ geritis approbabo. Nec volo ut ibi tergum conspiciatur ubi, cum cor ignoretur, scandalum oriri queat." Supplicabat autem reginæ ut posset cum aliquo amico esse; nam alias præferre se dixit Turrim Londinensem cuicunque carceri; indicans quemcunque locum præscriptum carcerem esse. Quod ideo addebat quia solent Catholici pseudo-episcoporum custodiis committi, quorum ille consuetudinem ferre non potuit, quia non est conventio lucis ad tenebras, neque Christi ad Belial. Hoc proprium est huic pontifici quod ceteri eum episcopi, tanquam monachi abbatem aut archimandritam aliquem, omnino sequuntur, et summa observantia colunt.

Thirlbæus, Eliensis episcopus. Cum in Galliis legatione fungens audiret quam inique affecta esset regina erga religionem, omnesque nunquam reversurum arbitrarentur, ultro domum rediit ut fidem Catholicam confiteretur. Cumque contraria omnia Lutherani ab eo jam reverso expectassent, non modo fidem integerrime tutatus est in parlamento, sed etiam seipsum purgavit quod aliquando in certis ritibus dissensisse a Catholicis visus est. "At ego," inquit, "statui deinceps ab omni via inordinata cavere, ac matris Ecclesiæ meorumque majorum fidem illibatam servare." Eidem oblatum est ut exiret e carcere neque ad communionem cogeretur, modo ad publicas preces vellet accedere; qui visitatoribus respondit, adhuc sibi suam conscientiam in ea re non satisfa-cere. (265b) Supplicare autem se reginæ dicebat, ut ratione totius ætatis in legationibus et publicis negotiis regni transactæ ipsum in privata vita liberum agere permitteret. Moti visitatores hæsitantia responsi dilationem ei dederunt in aliud tempus, quo tempore, quando eandem interrogationem iterum proposuissent, "Nisi dissimulare volo," inquit, "ad vestras preces accedere non possum."

Bonnerus, Londinensis episcopus. Vir tanta magnitudine animi præditus ut infinitas pertulerit persecutiones. Nam et Catholicorum aliqui habentes misericordiæ speciem ipsum sæpe reprehenderunt, quod tam vehemens in hæreticis puniendis fuisset, ut plures unus ab ecclesia rejecerit et brachio sæculari tradiderit quam omnes reliqui episcopi. Quibus vir sapiens respondere solebat, misericordiæ plenam esse illam unius mortem quæ vitam multorum conservaret. In Republica non tam ad singulos respiciendum esse quam ad totum corpus civium.

Cum sub Edouardo VI fuisset in vilissimo carcere quinque annis continuis, præfectusque carceri ab eo aliquid accipere sperans minitatus esset severius ipsum posthac tractandum fore, lectumque in primis auferendum, fortissimus hic confessor "Si rem," inquit, "hujusmodi attentaveris, ego recte novi quid faciam." "Quid," inquit custos, expectans ut diceret alicui ex concilio querelam se propositurum. At ille, "Jacebo," inquit, "in terra." Idque vere fecit, ablato per custodem lecto; neque alicui de illa injuria conquestus est. (266) Jam vero sub Elizabetha neque in publicum prodire potuit sine vitæ periculo, tam erat Lutheranis invisus. Russellus comes Bedfordiæ cum videri vellet disertus, ac Bonnero gratias in senatu egisset quod reginæ propositum in religione tantis studiis promoveret, retorquens episcopus ironiam, "Non sum," inquit, "tam cupidus laudis ut vituperium ejus appetendæ causa incurrere velim. Quod si quæ religio in mea ecclesia proponatur quæ non sit catholica, non modo id inscio me fiet, sed etiam invito." Si cui episcoporum mors aliquando inferetur, certum est hunc virum ei malo primum destinari. Est ergo proximus martyrio.

Watsonus, Lincolniensis episcopus. Hic superat omnes memoria et doctrina. Oblatam conditionem de libertate si vellet officiis interesse recusavit, nam si conscientia permitteret illis assentire, permitteret eadem opera et prædicare et communicare. Jussus a visitatoribus ut vir tam doctus causam suæ recusationis afferret, dicebat se doctum experientia esse ne in causa religionis disputaret, nisi judicem suum prius cognovisset.

Scotus, Cestrensis episcopus, qui cæteris par in constantia, omnibus in eloquentia est superior. Nunquam ei oblatum fuit sub ulla conditione ut custodia solveretur. Credo quia intellectis aliorum sententiis, illum eodem animo futurum existimabant.

Burnus, Bathensis episcopus, interrogatus post ablatam dignitatem, an libertatem redimere vellet per accessionem ad publicas preces, negavit: id esse indicium per quod assensus ad totam religionem argui posset.

(266b) Pateus, Vigorniensis episcopus, post spoliationem admonitus ut publicis precibus adesset, respondit suam conscienciam, quæ unicum jam sibi solatium restaret, hoc non pati. Jussus rationem reddere, "Non," inquit, "audeo, ne disputando in legis, quæ hoc vetat, pœnas incurram. Mihi propositum est in ea fide mori in qua sum baptizatus."

Troblefildus, Exoniensis episcopus, exutus episcopatu, audire officia schismatica recusavit propter conscientiæ gravissimum testimonium.

Polus, Petroburgensis episcopus, vir gravissimus, propter diuturnam infirmitatem morbi, et sero depositus est, nec unquam invitatus ut ipsorum maledictis horis schismaticis interesset.

Goldevellus, Assaffensis episcopus sedi Apostolicæ fidem suam et cæterorum episcoporum offerendam judicavit, quæ, ut mater est omnium Ecclesiarum, sic nunquam confugientibus ad se gremium clausit.

Landaffensis, de quo an episcopus haberi debeat ideo Catholici dubitant, quia, reconciliato sub Maria regno, solus dicitur confirmationem a sede Apostolica non postulasse, ut mirum jam non sit si et schismati cedat et pseudo-episcopos extra ecclesiam consecret. Neque tamen sacer ille chorus episcoporum per ejus defectionem, qui episcopus legitimus nunquam fuit, contaminatur.

(267) De iis decanis quos adhuc in carcere detineri accepimus.

Henricus Colus, D. Pauli apud Londinum decanus, in utroque jure, in philosophia, in theologia doctissimus, tantam præterea in cibo potu et somno parcimoniam adjunxit, ut nemo in vita privata felicius vivere judicetur. Hic est qui, quod hæreticis in prima quæstione se opposuit, multa gravissima coercebatur, idem et sub Edouardo VI et nunc beneficiis exutus fidem integer confitetur.

[Confitetur autem in cœlo, nam postquam scripsi hæc, illum e vita excessisse accepi.]*

Joannes Boxollus, Vindesorii arcis decanus, secretarius reginæ Mariæ, tam innocentur se gessit ut singularem laudem consecutus sit. Neque aut alium regina Elizabetha magis volebat suum facere, aut alium habuit in religione graviorem adversarium. Cum valde infirmaretur in Turri, ac Senatus obtulisset ut in domo aut Cantuariensis aut Londinensis pseudo-episcoporum degeret, carcerem se dixit præferre. Frustra interim supplicans ut in privati alicujus ædes deferri posset, conditionem veniendi ad publicas preces omnino respuit.

Joannes Harpsfildus, Noruicensis decanus, jussus centum viginti aureos, ob disputationes cum hæreticis habitas, solvere, ac liber esse cum pecuniam solvisset, non est dimissus. Jubebat enim senatus fidejussorem dare quod honeste victurus esset, quod ille merito facere noluit, quia intelligebat honestatis interpretationem a senatu scismatico pendere. Vir omni honore dignus ob probitatem et doctrinam.

* See note, p. 37, infra.

(267b) De iis archidiaconis quos adhuc in carcere detineri accepimus.

Nicholaus Harpsfildus, Cantuariensis Ecclesiæ archidiaconus, navim evadendi causa ingressurus deprehenditur, et in miserrimum carcerem inclusus egregia constantia fidem defendit. Vir in omni facultate linguarum, civili et theologica, doctus.

Langdalus, Cicestrensis archidiaconus, scripsit contra Ridleum hæreticum, eamdemque fidem quam prius calamo propugnabat nunc dignitatis amissione tuetur.

Chedseus, Midelsexensis archidiaconus sub Edouardo VI Petrum Martirem, Zwinglianum, Oxonii publicis in disputationibus confutans, tum quoque, ut et nunc, in carcerem conjectus est.

Maruinus, Surriensis archidiaconus, fidem confessus honorem et libertatem amisit.

Dracottus, Lincolniensis archdiaconus, statim ab initio regni Elizabethæ in custodia positus est, quod hæreticum noluit in cujusdam beneficii possessionem inducere.

Fijamus, Tantonensis archidiaconus, relicta domo aufugit, neque adhuc scitur quo se contulerit.

Tres archidiaconi, trajecto mari, variis in locis degunt, obscuri omnes.

(268) Canonici et alii Presbyteri insignes qui adhuc in carcere detinentur.

Thomas Hardingus, in ecclesia Sarisburiensi præcentor et in Wintoniensi canonicus. Cum sub Edouardo VI paululum a fide Catholica declinasset, sub Maria conversus, insignem habuit Oxonii concionem, in qua originem patefecit et sui erroris (dum Hebraicæ linguæ causa legeret Germanorum commentarios) et conversionis, dum miraculum notaret, quod Deus in restituenda per Mariam Catholica fide in Anglia operatus fuit. A visitatoribus nunc cum maxima illorum spe rogatus, ut suis dogmatibus subscriberet, "Prius," inquit, "manum perdam." Itaque etiam in custodia manet confessor fidelis, et vir ob innocentiam vitæ, ingenium et doctrinam omni honore post fidem ita probatam dignissimus.

Setonus, D. Theol., canonicus item in ecclesia Wintoniæ, insignis poeta, concionator bonus et confessor venerandus.

Hillus, item canonicus Wintoniensis, prædicator dulcis, qui, Caleto capto cujus pastor erat, cum hostes effugisset in Angliam, ad suos veniens ab Elizabeta spoliatus est.

Thomas Hidus, quartus est in eadem ecclesia Wintoniensi canonicus, qui post interdictum prædicans in carcere fidem egregie confitetur.

Darbisherus, episcopi Londonensis cancellarius, et D. Pauli apud London canonicus, ab officio et beneficiis propter fidem remotus.

Thomas Woddus, reginæ Mariæ capellanus, in ipso actu privationis populum obtestatus est ut ab hæresi et schismate caveret.

Morganus, baccalaureus theologiæ, privandum se videns, "Bene," inquit, "hoc aliquibus charo constabit." Visitatores conjurationem detegendam rati, tandem intelligunt ipsum ad rem medicam, cui antea operam dederat, nunc iterum reversurum.

(268[b]) Welsus, Dalbeus [Larkus] Morœnus, Tomsonus, Fezardus, Burdettus, Hichinsus, prædicatores omnes, et ob fidei confessionem beneficiis spoliati, in custodia manent præter alios presbyteros innumerabiles, quot me neque novisse contigit, neque de illis audivisse.

Hopkinsus, cancellarius Sarisburiensis, vir doctisimus.

Cratfordus, Wellensis canonicus (mortuus in Hispania *). [Burfordus, Copsellus, Wellensis canonici, Slopadii agunt] †

Thresamus, Doctor Th., canonicus in ecclesia Christi, Oxon, et sub Edouardo VI et nunc egregius confessor.

Atkinsonus post interdictum reginæ prædicavit intrepidus, nunc in custodia positus ad amicos scribit se exultare quod aliquid pro fide patiatur, sed minimum sibi videri quod patitur. Habuit semper vir ille animum martyrio dignum.

Rambrigius doctor et Clips, cum multis aliis presbyteris nuper in Turrim Londinensem conjecti sunt, quod missam contra interdictum Reginæ et Parlamenti dixisset.

(269) De iis religiosis qui aliquid fidei causa passi sunt.

Fecnamus, abbas Westmonasterii prope Londinum, expulsus est e sua domo cum omnibus monachis, ipseque in Turrim Londinensem inclusus; ubi cum ei promitteretur venia et libertas, idque sine communicandi necessitate, si tantum publicas preces audire in templo vellet, "Cum de vestra," inquit, "congregatione fuero, ad vestras preces accedam." Totus ergo S. Benedicti ordo sub hoc duce monasterio ejectus est, neque potuit a regina obtinere ut mare trajiceret.

Carthusiani sub Chaseo, viro singulari, omnes in Flandriam obtenta principis venia trajecerunt.

Franciscanis hoc in trajiciendo singulare accidit, quod cum iter illud a Londino in Antuerpiam plerumque tribus, ad mininum non nisi duobus diebus expediri soleat, illi viginti quatuor horis id confecerunt cum etiam impedirentur in via.

Monachi et moniales ordinis S. Brigidæ sua domo ejecti in alienam in Flandria recepti sunt.

Moniales ordinis S. Dominici sub optimo patre Ricardo Dominicano trajecerunt, cum earum aliquæ octogesimum ætatis annum attigissent, inter quas est soror venerabilis episcopi Roffensis, venerabilis ipsa mulier.

His omnibus e regno exeundi veniam impetravit Ill[mus] comes de Feria, Hispanus, Philippi tum in Anglia orator.

Langtonus monachus S. Benedicti nuper evasit in Flandriam.

* Added later. † Cancelled.

(270b) Quid Oxoniensis Academia ob fidem passa sit.

Primum, sex magnorum collegiorum præsides ejecti sunt.

1. Rainoldus, Mertonensis præses, in custodia mortuus.

2. Belserus, S. Joannis præses et canonicus Ecclesiæ Christi in Oxonia.

3. Slitherestus, Trinitatis præses, in carcere mortuus.

4. Chedseus, Corporis Christi præses.

5. Henshaus, collegii Lincoln præses.

6. Wrightus, Baliolensis coll. præses.

Deinde cum visitatores peterent confirmationem visitationis suæ ab Academia, procurator ejusdem, Edouardus Brumbrogus, liberrime dixit schismatica gesta se confirmari non passurum. Idem cum dicerent Simsonus, Dauxeus, Smitheus et Delahidus, Hibernus, hi quinque in carcere reclusi sunt. Atque hæc publica sunt.

Ad singula quæque collegia cum visitatores venissent, neque juramentum neque subscriptionem a vigesimo quoque obtinere potuerunt. Dicam quid in uno collegio accidit, quod mihi notissimum est, quia ex eodem fui, unde potest de cæteris fieri conjectura. Collegium est B. Mariæ quod vulgo Novum dicitur. Ex eo primum discesserunt presbyteri decem capellani. Deinde sex socii majores natu tam libere fidem confessi sunt ut in custodiam ponerentur, Brumbrogus, Rastallus, Foxus, Giblett, Dirrhamus et Davisius, omnes docti et valde boni. Vocare autem alios visitatores noluerunt, quia eandem constantiam in quinquaginta aliis se reperturos audiverant; ad blanditias igitur conversi orabant ut ad templum tantum accederent, et a juramento, subscriptione, omnibusque pœnis immunes essent. Trajecerunt mare ex eodem collegio quatuordecim. Discesserunt præterea multi qui trajicere aut non potuerunt aut noluerunt. Denique ex centum personis quæ in choro sunt, nunquam adhuc vel decem in Paschate adducti sunt, ut communionem scismaticam acciperent.

(272) Quid Cantabrigiensis academia obfidem passa sit.

Expulsi sunt præsides collegiorum quatuor.

1. Bullochus, præses collegii S. Joannis.

2. Tailerus, præses collegii Christi.

3. Pecokus, præses collegii ejus quod ibi a Regina denominatur.

4. Iongus, D. Th., qui cum Buccero archihæretico sæpe sub Edouardo VI disputaverat, idem nunc præses Aulæ Pembruchensis ejectus est.

Discesserunt ex uno collegio S. Trinitatis presbyteri sedecem, ex quibus aliqui transierunt mare, cæteri ad amicos se contulerunt. Multi præterea docti viri ex diversis collegiis discesserunt. Denique tanta visa est studiosorum in omni genere constantia, ut opus fuerit eos muneribus et blanditiis lucrari, atque etiam legibus publicis in hoc soluti sunt, ut, cum cæteris officia ecclesiastica in vulgari lingua proponantur, ipsis Latinam liceat retinere linguam.

Quid Ludimagistri ob fidem passi sunt.

Thomas Hidus, maximæ scholæ Wintoniensis magister, ejectus est.

Fremannus, Londinensis scholæ magister, cum a visitatoribus admoneretur, ut juramento suscepto sibi et uxori prospiceret, prodiit uxor, "Atque ego," inquit, "potius, mi vir, pro utroque nostrum mendicabo."

Harresius, Thomæ Mori secretarius, scholæ Bristoliensis magister, et officio et victu privatus est.

Benedictus, Salisburiensis scholæ magister, in magna paupertate, tamen ejici maluit quam fidem abjurare.

Sebastianus, qui organa pulsabat apud D. Paulum Londini, cum vellet ejici, tamen tum ita charus Elizabethæ fuit ut nihil schismatice agens locum suum in ea ecclesia retineat. Hæ autem sunt maximæ scholæ, idemque cogitandum est de aliis multis.

(272[b]) Quid laici ob religionem passi sunt.

Totus ordo judicum eorum qui criminalia judicia exercent, consentiente voce, a regina petiit ut absolverentur a necessitate abjurandi Pontificis Romani primatum; aliter cum id juramentum contra conscientiam esset, officio suo se fungi non posse. Regina quod non habebat ex suis Lutheranis unde ordinem gravissimum suppleret, necessario coacta est eis jurandi necessitatem remittere.

Dierus quidam officium Summi Cancellariatus recusavit, quod in scismate id se administraturum negaret.

Antonius Brunus, vicecomes clarissimus.

Edouardus Walgravus, qui fuit a conciliis Mariæ.

Thomas Whitus et Robertus Throgmortonus, qui erant a supplicibus libellis.

Rastellus et Roperus, advocati.

Frierus, Medicus.

Storeus, juris civilis doctor, cum aliis valde multis, omnes partim officiis exuti sunt, partim in carcerem conjecti. Storeus idem in Parlamento pro Pontificis Romani primatu insigni cum laude peroravit.

Ethrigius, Græcarum literarum Oxoniæ professor, a lectione remotus ob Catholicam fidem.

Hastingus, clarissimus baro, et Tho. Wharton, Thomas Mordantus, Tho. Stradlingus, equites, omnes in carcerem nuper conjecti quod Missam audivisse dicerentur.

Ricius, Largus, Poolicius, Feltonus, decem ex iis qui juri Anglico student in carcerem conjecti quod Missæ interfuerint, præter centum sexaginta plebeios.

Martinus, doctor Juris civilis, in custodiam fidei causa inclusus.

Joannes Leus, eques, et Shelleus et Harveius, partim quasi exulant in Hispania, partim in Flandria, præter alios multos.

(273) Quid mulieres ob fidem passæ sunt.

1. Domina Jana Dormera, quasi exulat Lovanii. 2. Clementissa item Antwerpia cum liberis omnibus. 3. Clarentia, Mariæ reginæ nutrix in Hispania exulat. 4. D. Walgrava. 5. D. Argalla. 6. D. Whartona. 7. D. Hublethorna. 8. D. Vicia, omnes equitum uxores, in carcerem injectæ, quod Missam audisse dicerentur, præter alias mulieres plebeias, quarum nomina propter ipsarum obscuritatem non scribuntur.

Quomodo plebs affecta sit erga fidem catholicam.

Cum plebs Anglicana ex agricolis, pastoribus et opificibus consistat, agricolæ et pastores catholici sunt, nec opificum alii sunt infecti scismate quam sedentarii, ut textores et sutores, et quidam otiosi aulici. Jam extremæ partes regni sunt ab hæresi alienissimæ, ut est Wallia, Devonia, Westmerlandia, Cumbria et Northumbria. Cum enim urbes in Anglia et parvæ sint et raræ, neque in rure hæresis habitet, ac ne quidem in urbibus extremis, constans prudentum opinio est centesimum quemque ex Anglis non esse infectum, unde et Lutherani suum gregem parvum appellant.

Quid pueri ob fidem passi sunt.

In publica schola Wintoniensi cum ludimagister in carcere maneret, præsesque collegii schismaticus ad schismaticam eos concionem convocaret, tantum abest ut parere voluerint, ut etiam a publicis precibus abstinentes in cubicula se incluserint. Objicienteque illo ipsorum inobedientiam, quæsiverunt an vellet innocentum animas perdere. Denique cum vim præses adhiberet, ducem militarem ex portu proximo in auxilium advocans, ex pueris fere duodecim e collegio aufugerunt; cæteri publico metu coacti ad templum se postea invitissimi contulerunt. Ita "ex ore infantium et lactentium perfecit Deus laudem suam," non enim ullus est ordo, non sexus, non ætas, quin fidem catholicam egregie in hac persecutione defenderit.

(273[b]) Quid ii ob fidem passi sunt qui ad episcopatus nominabantur.

1. Joannes Danisterus, presbyter, primus merito numerabitur, quia fere solus est confessor ex iis qui a regno evaserunt. Is enim cum trajicere vellet deprehensus, in carcere vilissimo fidem confessus est. Cumque eodem fere tempore presbyter alius in eundem carcerem introductus per amicos impetrasset ut dimitteretur, ac præfectus carceris in persona errans Danistero potestatem exeundi faceret, vir integerrimus oblata facultate uti noluit, sed hominem demonstravit quem exire oportebat. Præfectus, hominis innocentiam admirans, non destitit cum concilio agere donec et Danisterum e vinculis liberasset. Hic vir Vintoniæ puer, Oxoniæ adolescens educatus, omnes semper æquales suos, puer in carmine componendo atque in omni re poetica, adolescens in studiis eloquentiæ ac juris civilis, demum nunc juvenis in re theologica superavit, cujus rei specimen Lovanii edidit, magna cum laude prædicans in Quadragesima ultima. Jam tantæ gravitatis fuit semper, ut ei Catonis nomen impositum est.

2. Mauritius Clenock. Quamvis licentiam exeundi e regno accepisset, postea tamen privatus fuit omnibus iis beneficiis quæ habebat in Anglia. Vir summæ integritatis. Jam quantum laboris fidei causa hic sumpserit nemini potest esse obscurum. Fuit per Mariam reginam et Polum cardinalem ad episcopatum Bangorensem nominatus. Juris civilis doctor.

3. Gilbertus Burfordus fuit ecclesiæ Wellensis canonicus. Oxoniæ operam dedit theologiæ. In scholastica doctrina Danisterum superat, ab eodem superatus in eloquentia et juris cognitione. Vir gravis et ad res agendas aptissimus.

(274) Gulielmus Tailerus, Cantabrigiæ in studio theologico valde profecit, ubi erat præses collegii Christi. Homo magni animi, nisi forte ab honoris expectatione vincatur.

5. Ægidius Capellus, ecclesiæ Wellensis canonicus, vir ob doctrinam non tam dignus honore quam eodem dignissimus ob miram modestiam et probitatem, est in theologia tamen satis doctus, et imperfectum scientiæ (ut dicit Innocentius Papa) supplet perfectio charitatis.

6. Henricus Jolliffus, Bristoliensis ecclesiæ decanus, non indoctus, in quo summa laus est, zelus erga fidem catholicam, qui tamen communis est omnibus.

Peroratio.

Hæc pauca, Ill^me^ Cardinalis, breviter proposui, ut saltem de singulis ordinibus et gradibus aliquid scribens de similibus quid judicandum esset ostenderem. Non enim potui centesimum quemque ex presbyteris aut scholaribus nominare, jam quot millia plebeiorum esse putamus qui non curvaverunt genua Baal? Quæ autem vel de universis vel de singulis hic scripsi, puto verissima esse omnia. Nam pleraque multis optimorum* literis contestata vidi, quædam sunt omnibus nota, pauca vero ab aliis fide dignis hominibus accepi.

Reliquum est ut amplitudo tua nostræ nationis negotia, sicuti hactenus fecit, in omni re promoveat. Neque enim, secundum Deum et SS^m^. D. N. Pium Papam IV, alium jam habet Anglia protectorem, præter Ill^m^ Cardinalem Moronum, quibus utrisque ac patriæ nostræ salutem, pacem ac æternam felicitatem tribuat is qui singulis providet D. N. Jesus Christus. Amen.

Tuus humilis et supplex,

NICOLAUS SANDERUS,
presbyter tuo beneficio.

TRANSLATION
DR SANDER'S REPORT TO CARDINAL MORONI [? May, 1561]

[PART I]

What has been done by the Bishops and Clergy of England acting together in the cause of the Faith.

ALTHOUGH all that relates to the state of religion in England is well known to your Eminence, either through accurate information from others, or from your own enquiries, yet even as blessed Antherus, pope and martyr, was not satisfied to know that those who suffered death for Christ were many, but diligently searched into the things that they had done. So too Eutichianus, pope and martyr, following his example, buried 342 martyrs with his own hands, and many Roman pontiffs after them, have taken care to preserve by their writings the accounts of the lives and deaths of the martyrs. So I, most reverend Cardinal Moroni, have thought that you following in their footsteps would not be unwilling to hear, in addition to what is generally known about the constancy of the English Bishops, some details concerning the cause and conduct of each of them.

As you have asked to know the names of the prisoners, it seemed to me, you would be still more pleased to hear of what they said and did. For if things of this sort are remembered before God in heaven, and if a sure reward is there laid up for each, ought they not also to be devoutly kept in mind, and recounted by us in this valley of tears? I will, therefore, reverend cardinal, relying on your indulgence, but in briefer terms than so great a subject demands, run over such of those things that have happened to us in the last two and a half years as are most worthy to be related.*

After the removal on one day † of the two brightest figures in all England, Queen Mary and Cardinal Pole, it pleased God to try the faith of the good, and to make manifest the evil designs of the wicked. Elizabeth, therefore, succeeding to the throne began to remove all the Catholics from the Council, and to replace them by Lutherans, (252[b]) and it was no longer doubtful to any one what in her heart she had resolved and decided to do in religion. Then the small band of Bishops, deprived both of their support and of their guide, silently casting themselves on God, seemed to us who were there, vividly to represent the state of things which existed in the Roman Church, at the time when the fierce persecutor Nero, after making martyrs of the blessed apostles Peter and Paul on one and the same day, threatened the rest with destruction. Nay more, the Bishops, encouraging one another by this very precedent, said that in each case God intended openly to show that His truth depended

* The letter was written therefore about the middle of 1561. [B.]

† That Mary and Pole died on the same day is contrary to Machyn and Burleigh and nearly all authorities, but it is proved to be true by Priuli, an eye-witness (Venetian Calendar). [B.]

not in Rome on the lives of Peter and Paul, nor in England on those of Reginald Pole and Queen Mary. They did, however, what in such a time their highest duty required, for they preached everywhere, and testified to princes and all the people their faith in holy Church and that of their forefathers.

Thus Dr Scott, Bishop of Chester, and Dr Bayne of Lichfield, discoursed of the unity of the Church, of the blessed eucharist and the pope's supremacy, with a cogency and suitableness that left nothing to be desired.* Shortly after, Dr. White, Bishop of Winchester, seeing that things were going from bad to worse, having among the audience, on the occasion of the solemn funeral of Queen Mary, the principal people of the kingdom, (253) preached boldly, and freely repeated what the others had said, adding that he was placed as a watchman to see that the Church should suffer no injury, and that in view of the now greater certainty of the approach of the rabid wolves from Geneva, he earnestly besought his audience in God's name, by their souls' salvation, and by the glory of the heavenly kingdom, not to give credence to them, or to attend to their preaching. This sermon so affected those who heard it, that one of the chief of them, when it was concluded, said openly that if they would cast themselves into the infernal pit, it would not be the fault or with the consent of this Bishop, so far as he could prevent it. These things they said publicly.

Meanwhile, in order not to omit any part of their duty, Dr Heath, Archbishop of York, one of the most prudent and best men living in England, by common consent of his episcopal brethren, went to visit the queen. He was still retained in her council, either because she could not without shame remove from his office of Lord High Chancellor ✠ one who was so wise, and who had performed his functions with such virtue and integrity, or else in the hope of enticing and persuading him by this favour to relinquish the Catholic faith without difficulty and to side with her.

On this occasion, being alone with the queen, he is said to have addressed her in this wise.§ Falling on his knees, he invoked with tears the name of Jesus Christ, and begged that she, being a woman, would refrain from interfering with the sacred mysteries. He had passed through every degree of the schools and reached the highest honours, having been a bishop under her father Henry and her brother Edward, (253[b]) and Archbishop and Lord Chancellor under Mary, and that he had learnt by experience in the course of a long life, to say nothing of what he knew from study,

* If Scott and Bayne preached, it must have been in November or December, for all preaching was soon prohibited. Not long after Mary's death a sermon was preached at St Paul's cross, some say by the Bishop of Chichester (Christopherson), others by the Bishop of Chester (Scott). Scott spoke strongly in Parliament. [B].

§ We are not to suppose that these are meant to be verbatim reports of Heath's speech, or of the queen's answer. But in substance they may be true enough.

that great mischief accrues to the State from frequent changes, even in the laws relating to the administration of justice. How much less then ought alterations to be attempted in religion, where evidence of antiquity was accounted so great a commendation? Now it was proposed to attempt this, not with any ceremony, but with the highest mysteries of the faith, which mysteries (as the name itself implies) should be reverenced in silence, rather than be made the subject of popular debate. To call in question such sacraments, after such a length of time, and to do this in a kingdom in which, by a manifest marvel of God's providence, the late schism was but just removed, how could this fail to be injurious to the queen herself, grievous to the citizens and perilous to the whole kingdom? The most clement of princes, he said, should forgive him his freedom, for he was bound to speak on many accounts. For in a matter which touched her so closely her councillor ought not to be wanting to his prince, or its bishop to the see of York, or to the whole nation the sole archbishop who survived.

"But if (which may God avert) religion should unhappily be overthrown in this kingdom, I warn, I proclaim and declare beforehand, that I will not recede a nail's breadth in the least thing from the decrees of the Catholic Church, and in that quarrel I will resist every suggestion from others, and even from your Majesty, by every means in my power, to the last moment of my life."

After he had said this, the queen, who had at once bidden him rise, comforted him with many words, (254) and ended by declaring that she would do nothing which should not be approved of by many prudent men (among whom she regarded him as chief) and by the whole nation assembled in parliament.

By now there had arrived in England from Geneva most ravenous wolves, and they had come furnished with every ingenious contrivance for propagating heretical faction. See in the first place the New Testament translated into the vulgar tongue, and this all the way from Geneva. Then Church offices, not merely proposed for future consideration, but already in type and printed. See too the hackneyed quotations, pitifully wrested from scripture, but well adapted to upset the minds of the people. The chief point in these articles was the question—answers to which had been prepared long before—whether the ecclesiastical offices ought properly to be celebrated in a tongue unknown to the people. And because in that controversy they thought they would have it all their own way, they moved some councillors belonging to their faction to institute public disputations, in which Lutherans should take the judges' seats, and without ado pass sentence in favour of the heretics. To be brief, the bishops were warned to prepare themselves for disputations in six days. But they, simple men, made answer that they were secure against all assailants, by a prescription which extended over the legal period, for the religion in which they stood had always within the recollection of their fathers and predecessors, been received as Catholic, without any contradiction. They would therefore not institute a controversy, as plaintiffs, as if uncertain of their cause, but on the contrary, being in possession, would leave it to their opponents to bring proof before a lawful judge, if they contended that any ecclesiastical right was on their side. And although the judge was not then known, yet confident in the goodness of their cause (254[b]) they left themselves in the hands of the council.

The articles of the Lutherans are therefore propounded.

1. The celebration of ecclesiastical offices in an unknown tongue is contrary to the express word of God and the custom of the early Church.

2. In the sacrament of the Eucharist there is no transubstantiation of the bread into the Body, nor of the wine into the Blood of Christ.*

3. The Mass is not a propitiatory sacrifice for the living and the dead.

One day was occupied in exhibiting these propositions. The next day the Catholics met to choose, according to the custom of the schools, the person to defend the Catholic cause, and they elected Dr Cole, Dean of St Paul's in London. On the third day the question began to be considered in what language the discussion should be held. For as the Lutherans wished it to be in the vulgar tongue, the Catholics applied to the queen that it might be in Latin, and when they seemed to have gained this point they were on the fourth day given to understand that all would be carried on in the vulgar tongue.

Then the Catholics began to perceive that nothing was intended except that they were to be overcome by a constant change of proceeding while yet unprepared. Lastly, on the day appointed for the disputation, the Catholics were asked whether their arguments would be written down. They said they much wished that what passed in the discussion should, in order to avoid misrepresentation, be reduced to writing, believing that this would be done by notaries there present.

On the appointed day both parties appeared. On one side were four Bishops and as many doctors, on the other eight Lutherans. (255) The judge occupied the tribune—a distinguished Lutheran, and a man of note, though not a nobleman—the keeper of the royal seal. Some of the Council sat by his side, among whom was the Archbishop of York. The judge called on the Catholics to speak. Cole observed that he had come not so much to speak as to refute what might be put forward on the opposite side. For it had been settled that upon that day the Catholics should defend the proposition that the use of the Latin tongue in the ecclesiastical offices in our Church, although unknown to the people, was neither contrary to the express word of God nor against the custom of the ancient Church. And as that question had two heads, he would explain in brief what he thought on each.

* Sander is here misinformed. The second proposition was entirely different. [B.] It affirmed that "Every church hath authority to change ceremonies," &c. Foxe, Acts and Monuments (ed. Townsend), vol. viii, p. 680.

"As to the first head, in which it is denied that the use of an unknown tongue is against the express word of God, this being but a simple negation, one thing at least may be said: that the point will never be proved by our adversaries, nor indeed, in the Apostle's words (1 Cor. xiv) is there that force which they suppose, as when we come to discuss them will clearly appear.

"As to the second head, in which we deny the use of an unknown tongue to be contrary to the custom of the ancient Church; to this, for the moment, I reply: By ancient Church is necessarily to be understood that which was established by the apostles themselves, and continued during the years that followed. It was therefore double from the beginning; there was one of the Greeks, and one of the Latins—the former was otherwise called the Eastern, the latter the Western. Now that very nomenclature, the Greek and Latin Church, what else does it set before us but the use in them of two tongues? (255[b]) The Greek Church was that which in its offices used the Greek tongue, the Latin in like manner that in whose offices the Latin tongue was employed.

"To prove the objective truth of what has been said, look around at the Christian Churches of every country, you will not find any, whether in Spain or France or Germany, after the establishment of religion, in which any tongue but Latin is used in the public offices. For that language was made sacred, together with the Greek and Hebrew, in the title of the Cross of Christ. A sacred tongue beseems sacred things; and although, through the rebellion of our fathers at the time of the Tower of Babel, the one aboriginal tongue became divided into several, so these many are by the humility of Jesus Christ reduced in number, and devoted throughout the world to the mystery of the Holy Trinity in the unity of the faith.

"I go back to ancient times," he said. "Look at this English church. Was any language but the Latin allowed in its offices? We have a succession of Bishops from Augustine and Mellitus, whom Gregory I sent into England to teach the gospel. These Bishops in the solemn offices have delivered this language to our predecessors, and passed it from one to another. If a thousand years are sufficient for a lawful prescription, this so ancient a language is not, I think, contrary to the usage of the ancient Church. We received it with the gospel, and we ought not to be ashamed of it, unless we are ashamed of the Christian religion. Now (he said) I await the arguments of our adversaries, to which, when I shall reply, it will be evident that what I have said is true."

(256) Here the moderator [Sir N. Bacon] asked if the Catholics had any further arguments to bring forward on this question. They answered they had nothing further to say before the disputation; one preface was enough. Place was then given to the Lutherans.

They, in their sanctimonious manner, falling on their knees, began to pray. The judge did the same; so did the Council and almost all the audience. The Archbishop of York alone neither came down from the tribune, nor uncovered his head, nor moved his lips, but erect and unmoved kept his seat, obeying the ancient canon of Laodicea, which declares it unlawful to receive the blessing of heretics, or to pray with them, 1 q. 1 c. "Non oportet" [i.e. Canon XXXII]. The Catholic bishops and doctors followed his example.

The impious prayer being over, one Horne came forward (the word in English is the equivalent of the Latin cornu), and began to read from a manuscript book a long and previously digested discourse on celebrating ecclesiastical offices in the vulgar tongue. The point of it was this: Paul wrote to the Corinthians that they should pray and sing with both spirit and understanding, that is to say, that what is sung should also be understood. "Else how shall he that holdeth the place of the unlearned say 'Amen' to thy blessing, because he knoweth not what thou sayest?" (1 Cor. xiv, 16). Again, "When you come together, let all things be done to edification" (ibid. 26). He added that in the primitive Church the fathers prayed in the vulgar tongue. Lastly, that they who acted otherwise, sinned not only against the divine and ecclesiastical law, but against the law of nature. When he had finished, the Bishops, thinking that all these things were merely introductory, expected that he would have put the arguments into a syllogistic form. But the moderator, as had been settled between him and the Lutherans, demanded that the speeches of each side should be given to him. (256[b]) "What speech?" asked the Catholics; "What Cole said, he delivered not as a complete exposition of his case, but merely as an opening with which disputations usually begin." "Have you then nothing in writing on this topic?" When the Bishops had answered that it was not usual to debate in writing, the moderator replied: "But so it was agreed amongst you." The Bishops agreed that mention had been made of writing, but that they had understood differently, viz., that the arguments were to be reduced into writing after having been verbally recited, and not that the whole was to be delivered in the form of a continuous speech. The judge laughed scornfully, appearing as if he had already gained the victory, and ordered the Catholics to write what they had said and what they intended to say. The Bishops asked time to do this, and also that the speech of their opponents should be issued to them. Two days were given for writing out what they thought fit on that day's topic, and it was arranged that in future each party should afterwards deliver its speeches to the other. It was further ordered that they should also prepare for the second question against the same day. Thus the first day came to a close without any disputation.

During the ensuing two days the Catholics (John Harpsfield, Archdeacon of London, having been entrusted with the preparations for the second question) collected the arguments, showing that the use of Latin in ecclesiastical offices was ancient, and not opposed to the word of God.

On the day fixed, having again returned to the appointed place, they were told to address themselves to the second question.

The Bishops were surprised at this, for though they had prepared what to say on the second question, they objected to enter upon it until the first was finished. In the first place they respectfully asked that, as the Lutherans had (257) given public utterance to their opinions, by which people might be led into schism, they might be allowed in like manner to read in public what they had now brought in writing. The judge replied that if they had anything written they might leave it with him, but should not read it in that place or on that day, as they must now proceed with the second question. "It shall be proceeded with," was the answer, "provided the previous question be first put in order, for there is no need to hurry in such a matter, nor is it allowable to us to betray in this way the cause of Christ and the Church."

The judge, feigning to be irritated, and to be on the point of rising, then suddenly resumed his seat, and asked each whether he would go on with the second question or not. The Bishop of Winchester, who sat first among the Bishops taking part in the disputations, rose and asked that, if they were not permitted to read what they had written, yet that at least he might say a few words that had occurred to him. The judge answered: "Except upon the subject of the second question you shall say nothing."

The venerable father had intended to express his sorrow, not only for the injustice of the judge, but also for the action of his own side in having consented, contrary to the Catholic tradition, to dispute with heretics, more especially with those who had neglected so many warnings and so many corrections of Holy Church and of its pastors; because, in fine, they were dealing with them under a moderator who was [more] vehement in his sect than any of them. Yet that they deserved pardon because they had not come to inquire, as if the matter were uncertain, but to confirm the minds of the queen and of her council, who had acknowledged themselves to be in doubt.

But because the Bishop could not say this, (257^{b}) he answered the question of the moderator in this manner: "We cannot suffer so great a prejudice to be done to the Catholic faith, as to proceed further without giving an answer to the arguments of the heretics."

Then the Bishop of Lincoln, being asked, replied: "What equity is this, or what just alternation of parties, that the arguments on one side should be quietly heard, and the other side should not be allowed to reply? And now, in addition to this, we ourselves are expected to assent to this great injury, which, for my part, is what I will not do."

Then the Bishop of Lichfield: "Those about to dispute must at least agree on some points. There can never be a well regulated debate with one who denies everything. In order, therefore, that we may dispute with greater certainty I would inquire of these (who confess they are not of us but oppose us) of what school they are. Are they Lutherans or Zwinglians or anabaptists, or to which of the thirty sects that flourish in Germany do they really belong? When they inform us on these points we shall know what principles they concede, and on what they may be confuted."

When the learned father had said these things with holy warmth, the moderator ordered him to answer the question. "I will answer," he said, "what my brethren before me have answered." In due order the rest of the Catholics replied in the same manner, except only Feckenham, Abbot of Westminster; for he, though declaring that the demand made to them was unjust, nevertheless, having been so brought up, that he could never fear a heretic, he would not refuse to dispute on the second question. The others, with reason, differed from this opinion, because they thought they foresaw that what they had experienced on the first point they would also have to endure on the second.

(258) The conferences being thus dissolved, all the Bishops and Catholic Doctors were shortly afterwards fined and cast into prison,* charged with disobedience to the excellent moderator, who had discovered a mode of arguing not according to the methods of Aristotle and Plato, but such as Alexander the Great invented, when he cut the Gordian knot with his sword, not with his wit.

The day for opening Parliament now drawing near,† it was necessary that the queen should previously be crowned and anointed. The Archbishop refused to do this, having understood that something schismatical was going to be introduced into the ceremony. Many requests for the same object were made to him, but in vain. Others of the Bishops also refused, but at length the Bishop of Carlisle undertook the function, not as a favourer of heresy, but lest the queen should be angry if no one would anoint her, and be more easily [moved] to overthrow religion. Nor at this time were things so desperate, but that many hoped it might still be possible to turn her from her purpose. The rest of the Bishops assisted at the anointing, until they saw that part of the ancient rite in the celebration of the Mass was changed. For the queen had introduced a novelty, by ordering that the consecrated Host should not be elevated for the adoration of the people.

Parliament having commenced its sittings, the Bishops, archdeacons and archpriests (for they had convoked a synod at the same time) all thought it expedient to act as follows. In order to make known their mind and judgement on certain matters to the laity, who were attending Parliament, they wrote four articles:

1. That they believed that in the Eucharist there is a real and natural presence of the Body of Christ, the bread being transubstantiated into the Body and the wine into the Blood: that this is the Catholic Faith according to the truth of the Gospel.

2. That the Mass is a propitiatory sacrifice for the living and the dead.

* All were fined, but only the Bishops of Lincoln and Winchester were cast into prison at that time. The other Bishops had to attend on the Council, besides their fine; but they continued to vote and speak in Parliament, as Sander also records later on. The general imprisonment came later. [B.]

† This is inexact. Parliament began before the Conferences.

(258b) 3. That the Roman Pontiff is the Head of the Church and the Vicar of Christ.

4. That the laity ought not to deal with sacred questions, and still less to make laws concerning them.

When all had severally subscribed these propositions, they sent them to the Parliament in order to be read to all. But the keeper of the Great Seal, who presided in Parliament, foreseeing that the action of the Bishops might injure his sect, kept them back and never allowed them to be divulged. When any controversial question arose in Parliament, the Archbishop of York ever protested that it ought not to be debated there, but in Convocation, by the Bishops and not by the laity. Then all the Bishops in succession said that they were of the same opinion, and not one of them ever differed in opinion from another. Following the Archbishop, the Bishops of Winchester, Lincoln,* Lichfield and Chester and the Abbot of Westminster spoke in weighty words, suffering no article to be passed over, which they did not perseveringly follow up, so that no answer could be made to their speeches; and yet (an unheard of thing), although the laity had nothing to say on any point, and avowed their admiration both of the ability and doctrine of the Bishops, yet they voted against them for no other reason than that the queen was understood to wish the contrary.

A remarkable thing occurred in this Parliament. Russell, Earl of Bedford, who had been in Rome a few years before, made an abusive attack on the Holy See, saying it was a sink of crime and a cesspool of iniquity. When he got thoroughly warm in his speech, not willing to seem to be without witnesses, extending his arm he called upon Anthony Browne, a noble baron, who had gone to Rome as ambassador with the Bishop of Ely, to testify to the truth of what (259) he had said, and even asked him by name whether, when he was at Rome, a harlot was not brought to his bedroom door by one of the cardinals. Anthony began to blush and to be greatly moved, for he was an excellent man, and so exceptionally Catholic that he did not assent in that Parliament to any schismatical measure. He had, moreover, previously declared in open Parliament that when he was in Rome he had assured the Pope, that England would never again fall away from its obedience and from the Catholic faith, and therefore, if others were not willing to keep the promise which had been publicly made, he in private could never be wanting to his word. Russell, seeing that he was disturbed, pressed him the more urgently to answer, whether a cardinal had really offered him a harlot. For this was a common calumny of the heretics, and they believed it to be true. Anthony, thus repeatedly attacked, at length rose, and complained with many words that he should be compelled to lie, or to injure the honour of another whom he respected. This delighted all the bad ones, who began to hope that this would touch the honour of the Pope. "But since," said Anthony, "I am publicly challenged in a place where it would be disgraceful to say anything that was false, I must acknowledge that I have received from many cardinals benefits and special favours, but none of them ever brought me a harlot, nor spoke, nor gave a hint of such a thing; and I know not from whom our good Earl could have heard it; but I declare to you before God and his angels, that what I have said is true."

* The Bishop of Lincoln took no part in the debates, nor was he present He was very sick both before and after the Conferences, and was then sent to the Tower. [B.]

Russell knew not what to answer or how to be silent. The accident was a happy one, though he could not by a thousand lies lose his honour, who either never had any (259[b]) or had lost it years before.

But let us return to the Parliament, whose fundamental law is that nothing is valid which is not there freely determined by the three estates, the spirituality which consists of all the Bishops and Abbots, the lords temporal consisting of the dukes, marquesses, earls, viscounts and simple barons, and of the commonalty, two burgesses from the cities and principal towns, as well as knights and "prefects" of each shire.

When therefore they came to vote, and neither a single Bishop nor Abbot gave his voice against the Catholic religion, one entire estate dissented from the change; and thus it is clear that the laws now in force in England are not only impious and unjust, but also are not to be regarded as laws at all, nor need they be revoked by Parliament, since they were not passed by its authority, being merely tyrannical ordinances made by a few contrary to the constitutional laws. However this may be, when the queen's will in regard to religion had been secured, it was necessary, in accordance with these tyrannical measures, either to conform or to be deprived of [ecclesiastical] dignities. All the Bishops, therefore, were despoiled, except one, namely, the Bishop of Llandaff; and when, in the following year, they were offered their liberty, if they would simply assist at the schismatical offices without being required to communicate, they refused their liberty, with the same constancy they had previously displayed in relinquishing their dignities.

So much for what was done by all in common; I will now speak of the words and actions of individuals, as far as they have come to my knowledge.

[PART II]

(260) Of the individual actions of those who have defended religion in England.

FIRST, I will speak of those Bishops and Deans who died in confinement, and then of those who are still detained in prison. But first I will quote a passage from the 6th epistle of the third book of St Cyprian's Letters.

"On the bodies," says he, "of all (who although they have not been tortured in prison, yet leave the stage [of this world] by a glorious death) let there be bestowed a very loving and watchful care. For their honourable constancy has been ample enough for them to be joined to the ranks of the blessed martyrs. As far as in them lay they have endured, in that they were eager and ready to endure. He who has in God's sight offered himself to torments and to death has suffered whatever he wished to suffer; for he has not shrunk from tortures but rather tortures have shrunk from him."

"It is written (Matthew x, 32) 'He that shall confess to Me before men, I will also confess to him before My Father who is in heaven.' They have confessed. The Lord says (Matthew x) 'He that shall endure unto the end, he shall be saved.' They have endured; and unto the very end they have preserved their meritorious virtues uncorrupted and stainless. And again it is written in the Apocalypse ii: 'Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee the crown of life.' Even to death have they come, faithful, steadfast and unconquered. When to our resolute will and to our testimony in prison and in bonds there comes the term of death, the glory of martyrdom is consummated. Finally note down also their days on which they depart, that we may be able to keep their commemorations while celebrating the anniversaries of the martyrs."

Thus far Cyprian, from whose words we may conjecture that we have now in hand, not only the acts of confessors but those of martyrs. One thing we must regret. As we were in a foreign country, we were not able to take note of the days [of their deaths].

(260b) Of the Bishops who have died in prison.

WE must certainly not pass by John Christopherson, Bishop of Chichester, who, although he was not seized by pursuivants nor placed in bonds, yet foresaw the change in religion and was animated by the desire of death for the faith. He was a man of great learning, and had skilfully translated into Latin much from Philo the Jew, and the whole Ecclesiastical History of Eusebius. Having taken part in the funeral of Cardinal Pole of happy memory [beatum funus C. Poli] he came home in a fever, and was never afterwards able to throw off his illness. Seeing therefore that he was dying he said: "For no other reason but one do I wish to live, for one thing only I greatly grieve, that I am not permitted to bear a share in the tempest which on account of religion impends over my brethren." Having said this, he peacefully expired.*

Oglethorpe, Bishop of Carlisle. It having been customary that at the feast of the Nativity of Christ, one of the Bishops should say Mass in the Royal Chapel, the Bishop of Carlisle being vested, stood at the altar, when two messengers deputed by the queen forbade him to elevate the sacred Host. He was astonished at this novelty, but boldly replied that whether he should say Mass at that altar or not, was as the queen pleased, but with what (261) rite, and with what ceremonies it should be said, he being a Bishop knew quite well, nor would he make any change. When the messengers left, he began to celebrate and proceeded in all things according to the ancient rite. But the queen not enduring to pay adoration to so great a sacrament, left after the reading of the Gospel, satisfied, as I suppose, with a mass of the catechumens, though unworthy to be a catechumen. The Bishop stained the great glory he acquired on this occasion by afterwards consenting to crown the queen; for what nearly all the other Bishops declined, he, deluded by I know not what hope, thought it right to do, thinking perhaps by this act of civility to induce the queen to think less seriously of making ritual innovations. When however he was despoiled of his episcopal dignity on account of his confession of the faith and was cast into prison,* he acknowledged to all his great sorrow at having crowned the queen, and thereby, as many thought, hasted the day of his happy death. (Epitaph, "Carleolum," etc., ut ante.)

Ralph Bayne, Bishop of Lichfield. He professed Hebrew at Paris with great distinction and wrote very learned commentaries on the Proverbs of Solomon. Having been consecrated Bishop he was of such constancy of mind in this persecution (261[b]) that he always went with joy to any questioning, and returned still happier. But having been deposed and sent away on bail, he was sitting both sick and sorrowful in his chair, when he heard a voice saying to him: "Be of good courage, for thou shalt suffer martyrdom." Whilst he lived, persons of credit said that he had related this circumstance, but without saying what kind of martyrdom he was to endure, but it was this: lying on his bed in great pain, he suffered such difficulty in passing water, that for six days he passed none. Whilst to the bystanders (the Bishop of Chester and the Dean of St Paul's being among them), his pains seemed quite unbearable, he never groaned, but lifting his eyes at one time to heaven, and at another resting them on a crucifix, he repeated the name of Jesus to the last moment of his life. So with this man there was no lack of suffering to lessen in any respect his title to be accounted a martyr. (Epitaph, "Quo te," etc., vide supra.)

Cuthbert Tunstall, Bishop of Durham. As a young man he brought out an excellent book on arithmetic, and as an old man one on the reality of the Body of Christ in the Sacrament of the Altar (262). Being at length in decrepitude, he was excused from attending Parliament, nevertheless, he not only came to it with speed, † but preached on his journey, in spite of the prohibition of the queen, exhorting his people to remain constant in the Catholic faith. And when this worthy father came into the presence of the queen, he began severely to reprove her, because though a woman she had taken on herself to meddle in religion, and had deprived herself of Bishops the like of whom were hardly to be found in the Christian world. "I confess," said she, "I am grieved for

* There is no other record that the Bishop of Carlisle was ever cast into prison, and I am inclined to doubt Sander's accuracy in this. [B.]

† Sander is wrong here; Tunstall never came to Parliament. He reached London July 20, 1559, whereas Parliament was dissolved on May 8. [B.]

York and Ely." "But," replied Tunstall, "How can you grieve, when you have the remedy in your own hands? If you wish to be a Catholic, you can not only have these in your council, but many others besides." Being then admonished in the council to change his religion, "Do you think," he said, "that for me, who as a priest and a bishop have taught the faith for more than forty years, it would be right, after so many years of study, after such practice and experiences, on the very verge of the grave, to accept a rule of faith from laymen my juniors?" They blushed, and began to tender him the oath of the queen's supremacy. On his refusing it he was deprived of his episcopal dignity, and committed to the charge of the pseudo-bishop of Canterbury, where after a few days the blessed old man expired. He lived so long for no other reason, as it seems to me, than that he might finally die a martyr, who had so often been a confessor. (Epitaph, "Cur tantum, etc.)

(262b) John White, Bishop of Winchester, was a man of such fine ability that he wrote a great number of epigrams. He published a book under the title of Diocosio-Martyrion, in which he collected two hundred testimonies from the Fathers in support of the truth of the Body of Christ in the Eucharist. Having been imprisoned for the faith in the time of Edward VI, he received a double honour under Mary, being translated from Lincoln to Winchester. On some nobleman vaunting that at any rate the Bishop of Llandaff had become a Lutheran, "What," he said, "may we not have one witless member of our order, without your claiming him as your own?" He was twice imprisoned by Elizabeth, and afterwards being despoiled of his dignity, and relegated under bail to a fixed place, he fell into a quartan fever. Seeing that he was sick unto death, he publicly professed the faith and ordered his body to be decently buried in Winchester Cathedral with his predecessors, with the following inscription on his tomb: "Here lies John White, who hopes for a part in the resurrection to come, together with the Bishops, his predecessors, whose faith he has kept, and recommended to be kept by all who belong to him. (Epitaph, "Tu puerum," etc.)

(263) Of the Deans who have died in Prison.

REYNOLD, Dean of Exeter, a man from whom we may conjecture what we ought to think about the Bishops and other glorious confessors; for what I heard him say in the beginning of the schism, I doubt not that the others kept daily before their eyes. For when I went to visit him, that learned man, when we were alone, spoke to me thus: "It was always," he said, "the sign of a bad man to deny the providence of God over His people, and now it would be especially impious and ungrateful not to acknowledge this willingly, for God has brought about this schism for our good. For, first of all, after we had been for twenty years separated from the Church, He restored us to the shepherd through Queen Mary. Then when we again began to run riot, and to be occupied with soliciting honours and gathering wealth, the queen, whom God gave for the sake of the Catholic cause, the same did God remove for her sake and ours, when her presence had become prejudicial. For her sake, because she was a very good woman; for ours, because under her we had become worse. Then at length comes Elizabeth, not destined to benefit herself but us only. For it is the privilege of the Church of God to grow by means of persecutions." Here taking my hand, he said, "Happy should we be, if we understood this. We who in the course of nature were going to die soon, might have had to fear for the salvation of our souls. But now by a good choice, we may from a necessary evil bring forth a most voluntary good. We may not only cleanse the stain which we incurred under King Henry VIII by abjuring the Pope, but also by a glorious profession of the Catholic faith merit a higher place in heaven." It could not be expressed how great a solace to me was that reverend man's speech. I had heard others bewailing that they had been born in these most woeful times, wherein they saw the Church of God so grievously wounded; and in sooth they seemed to me to speak not only wisely but also dutifully, until reclining on Reynold's apostolic breast, I drew from thence a draught of heavenly wisdom. Then I began to realize of what nature is that fount of living water which springs up unto eternal life.

(263[b]) And so in order that he might fulfil in deed what he had spoken in word, he determined to cast away in the first place all that might be an obstacle to martyrdom, and distributed money, furniture and all to his relations and to the poor. Then, as Exeter is nearly two hundred miles from London, he did not, like others, wait to be sent for, nor did he betake himself into distant parts of the kingdom or across the sea, but went straightway to London, lest he should be absent when it might be his duty to confess the faith. There he consoled the sick and reproved the fearful. Yet was he so discreet in all his speech, that he was of great service to every class of men. When summoned, he made so glorious a confession that being deprived of his benefices and dignity, he was shut up in prison. Now that the looked-for day had come, the holy man could no longer endure to live, for of what use is ripe fruit unless it be gathered up into heaven's storehouse? (Epitaph, "Non Rainolde," etc.)

(264) Stuart, Dean of Winchester, a venerable old man, having begun under Edward VI to make confession of the Catholic faith, was now to consummate it. He was deprived of his dignity and promoted to heaven. (Epitaph, "Corde fidem," etc.)

Seth Holland, Dean of Worcester, had been at Rome during the schism under Edward VI, and now desired to visit it again, but was arrested while preparing for flight. Being thrown into prison he left his country, but came not to Rome, for he preferred heaven to either place. (Epitaph, "Sethe fugis," etc.)

Henry Cole, Dean of London, a more fortunate man than I thought, for I had placed him among the confessors, but in truth he was a martyr. I had described him below as still alive here on earth, but he was living in heaven, for he has died in prison (if indeed he is yet dead).—(Epitaph, "Cole nihil," etc.) *

* See below, p. 40. Cole in truth did not die till February 4, 1580.

(264b) Of the Bishops who are still detained in Prison.

Heath, Archbishop of York, appeared even to Elizabeth so reverend a Father, that on the death of Mary she refused, except for custom's sake, to take the seal from him, he being chancellor of the kingdom. In this, although she seems to have dissembled, for she might have restored it to him immediately, yet it has been well observed by many that no other person has, to this day, been appointed to that office; only, instead of a chancellor, a Keeper of the Seal has been appointed, and the upstart brings discredit on the new title of honour.

When the illustrious Count de Feria, a Spaniard, visited the Archbishop before he was imprisoned and asked him what ought to be done in the present state of affairs, he answered: "There is nothing to be done, but everything to be endured, whatsoever God may will." It was well that this honoured confessor should be in such good spirits even under persecution. As he would neither crown the queen nor take the oath of supremacy to a woman, he was left in freedom for a year and a few months after his deprivation, then placed in confinement; liberty of living where he pleased was offered to him by the queen and council if only he would promise to be present at the ecclesiastical offices. But he would on no terms accept this offer. "The reason why I am unwilling to do so, the council have often enough heard me relate in Parliament. All of them may be summed up thus: Whatever is contrary to the Catholic faith is heresy; whatever is contrary to unity is schism." And when the visitors interposed that he would not be required to receive communion, "It is the same thing," quoth he, (265) "so far as schism is concerned, to do a little or to do all. Wherefore not only not by word, but also not by deed, will I approve of any part of your measures. Nor would I that even my back should be seen in a place, where, as the heart cannot be read, scandal might be given."

He petitioned the Queen that he might be allowed to stay with some friend, for otherwise, he said, he would prefer the Tower of London to any prison, hinting that any appointed place was a prison. He added this because Elizabeth's government was wont to commit Catholics to the custody of the pseudo-bishops, whose company he could not endure, for "there is no fellowship between light and darkness, nor between Christ and Belial." It is characteristic of this Bishop that the other Bishops, even as monks with their abbot or some Archimandrite, follow him implicitly and treat him with the greatest respect.

Thirlby, Bishop of Ely, when fulfilling an embassy in France, heard how iniquitously the Queen was disposed in regard to religion. Everyone now thought that he would never return, but he came back unsummoned in order to confess the Catholic faith. And though the Lutherans expected him on his return to have taken a very different course, not only did he most strenuously uphold the faith in Parliament, but also cleared himself in the matter of certain ceremonies, in which he once seemed to differ from the Catholics. "I am determined," said he, "to shun for the future every inordinate course, and to keep inviolate the faith of the Catholic Church and of my predecessors." He also was offered freedom from confinement without being obliged to receive the communion, if only he would attend the public prayers. He answered the visitors that his conscience was not yet satisfied that he could comply. (265[b]) He also said that he begged of the queen—on account of his having spent all his life in foreign embassies, and in the transaction of public affairs—that she would allow him to live in freedom though in retirement. The visitors, moved by the hesitancy of his answer, granted him a respite till another time, when they again made the same offer. He said: "Unless I should be willing to dissemble, I cannot go to your prayers."

Bonner, Bishop of London. A man endowed with such greatness of mind that he has suffered infinite persecutions. For even some Catholics, assuming an air of pity, often found fault with him for being so zealous in punishing heretics, having himself alone expelled from the Church and delivered to the secular arm more than all the other Bishops. To such this learned man was accustomed to answer that one death, by which many lives would be saved, was full of mercy. In matters of State, individuals were not to be so much regarded as the whole body of the citizens.

Under Edward VI he had been confined for five continuous years in a very vile prison, and the keeper of the prison, hoping to get something from him, threatened that he should be treated more severely in future, and (to begin with) that his bed should be taken from him, he courageously replied: "If you attempt this, I know right well what I shall do." "What?" said the keeper, expecting him to say that he would complain to some of the Council. The Bishop replied, "I shall lie on the ground." And so indeed, on the bed being removed, he did, and never complained of the injury.

(266) Under Elizabeth, he was never able to go out publicly without risk to his life, so hated was he by the Lutherans. When Russell, Earl of Bedford, wishing to gain a character for smartness, thanked Bonner in Council for having by his great zeal advanced the queen's cause in religion, Bonner retorting the irony, replied: "I am not so greedy of praise as to wish to incur reproach by seeking it; but if any religion that is not Catholic is put forward in my Church, it will be done, not only without my knowledge but against my consent." If any of the Bishops should be put to death, this man would certainly be the first victim. He is therefore the nearest to martyrdom.

Watson, Bishop of Lincoln. This Bishop surpasses all the rest in memory and learning. Being offered his liberty if he would attend the services, he refused, saying that if his conscience permitted him to assent thus far, it would allow him both to preach and to communicate. Being required by the visitors that he should as a learned man give his reasons for refusal, he answered that experience had taught him not to dispute on religion without first knowing who was to be his judge.

Scott, Bishop of Chester. He is equal to the rest in constancy, and superior to all in eloquence. He was never offered his liberty under any condition. The reason, I think, was that having heard what the others had said, they thought he would be of the same mind.

Bourne, Bishop of Bath, being asked, after having been deprived of his dignity, whether he would accept liberty on condition of going to the prayers, refused. It would be an argument through which people might conclude that he agreed to the whole of the [Protestant] religion.

(266[b]) Pate, Bishop of Worcester, being required after his deprivation to be present at service, answered that his conscience, which was now his only comfort, would not suffer him to do it, and being ordered to give his reason, replied, "I dare not, lest by disputing, I should incur the penalties of the law which forbids it; I am determined to die in that faith in which I was baptized."

Troblefield* Bishop of Exeter, having been deprived of his bishopric, refused for conscience' sake to listen to the schismatical offices.

Pole, Bishop of Peterborough, a man of weight and importance. On account of his prolonged sickness, his deposition was long put off. He was never required to be present at their accursed schismatical service.

Goldwell, Bishop of St Asaph, resolved to offer his own faith and that of the other Bishops to the apostolic see, which, being the mother of all Churches, never closes its bosom to those who fly to it.

The Bishop of Llandaff. Catholics doubt if he ought to be considered a Bishop, because after the reconciliation of the kingdom under Mary, he alone is said not to have sought confirmation from the apostolic see, and it is therefore not to be wondered at that he yields to the schism, and consecrates pseudo-bishops outside the Church. † Nor is that holy band of Bishops contaminated by his defection who never was a lawful Bishop.

(267) Of the Deans who, we hear, are still detained in prison.

Henry Cole, Dean of St Paul's in London. A man very learned in both laws, in philosophy and in theology. He was moreover so abstemious in food, drink, and sleep, that no one was thought to have lived in private more blessedly (felicius). It was he, who having opposed the heretics in the first debate, was punished with a very heavy fine; and being now, as well as in the time of Edward VI, deprived of his benefices, he confessed the faith.

He now confesses it in heaven. Since I wrote, I have heard of his death. §

John Boxall, Dean of Windsor Castle, secretary of Queen Mary; he lived so innocent a life that every one praised him. Nor was there any one whom Elizabeth would have preferred to bring

† This saying is very remarkable. It cannot be true, but still it must have been a report. What a hole-and-corner affair the consecration of Parker (if he was consecrated), must have been, to allow such reports to get about! [B.]

over to her side; nor had she in religion an adversary of greater weight. When very ill in the Tower and having had an offer from the council to live with the pseudo-bishop of Canterbury, or of London, he said he preferred his prison. Meanwhile he begged that he might live in some private person's house, but in vain; for he altogether declined the condition on which it would have been conceded, viz: that of coming to public prayers.

John Harpsfield, Dean of Norwich. He was ordered to pay 120 crowns on account of disputations with heretics, and should have been freed on payment of these moneys; but he was not discharged, for he was ordered by the council to give bail to live honestly, which he rightly refused, because he knew that the interpretation to be given to the word honestly would depend on the schismatical council. A man worthy of all esteem on account of his probity and learning.

(267[b]) Of the Archdeacons who, we hear, are now detained in custody.

Nicholas Harpsfield, Archdeacon of Canterbury. He was apprehended while about to take ship in order to escape, and being shut up in a vile prison, defended the faith with remarkable constancy. A man very learned in languages, in civil law and in theology.

Langdale, Archdeacon of Chichester. He wrote against Ridley the heretic, and now after the loss of his dignities, he preserves the same faith, which he had previously defended with his pen.

Chedsey, Archdeacon of Middlesex, having at Oxford in the reign of Edward VI refuted Peter Martyr, the Zwinglian, in public disputations, was then cast into prison, and is so now again.

Marvin, Archdeacon of Surrey, having confessed the faith, was deprived of his honours and liberty.

Draycott, Archdeacon of Lincoln, was thrown into prison at the beginning of the reign of Elizabeth, for refusing to induct a heretic into the possession of a benefice.

Foljambe, Archdeacon of Taunton, having left his house, took to flight, and it is not now known where he went.

Three other Archdeacons, having crossed the sea, live in various places, all in obscurity.

(268) Canons and other distinguished priests who are now in prison.

Thomas Harding, Precentor of Salisbury, and Canon of Winchester, having under Edward VI somewhat fallen away from the Catholic faith, was converted under Mary, and preached at Oxford a remarkable sermon in which he made public the cause, first of his fall, through reading German commentators for the sake of the Hebrew, and next of his conversion, which he attributed to the miraculous character of the restoration of the Catholic faith in England by Mary. Being now called upon by the visitors, who had much hope of his submission, to subscribe to their dogmas, he replied, "I will lose my head first." So he remains a faithful confessor in confinement. He is a man remarkable for innocency of life, ability and learning, most worthy of all honour after this trial of his faith.

Seton, Doctor of Theology, and also a Canon of Winchester Cathedral, a remarkable poet, a good preacher, and a venerated confessor.

Hill, also a Canon of Winchester, an agreeable preacher, who when Calais (of which he was pastor) was taken, fled from his enemies into England to his own countrymen, and was deprived by Elizabeth.

Thomas Hide, who was the fourth Canon in the Church of Winchester, for preaching after the prohibition, is now a notable confessor of the faith in prison.

Darbyshire, Chancellor of the Bishop of London and Canon of St Paul's, was deprived of his office and his benefice on account of the faith.

Thomas Woodhouse [Woddus], chaplain of Queen Mary, warned the people, at the very moment of his deprivation, to beware of heresy and schism.

Morgan, Bachelor in Theology, seeing that he was to be deprived, said, "Be it so: this will cost some people dear." The visitors, imagining that there was a conspiracy to be detected, understood, at length, that he meant to return to the practice of medicine in which he had previously been engaged.

(268[b]) Wells, Dalbey [Larke], Morwen, Thomson, Fezarde, Burdett, Hitchins, all preachers having been deprived of their benefices for their profession of the faith, remain in custody besides a great many other priests I do not know, nor have I even heard their number.

Hopkins, Chancellor of Salisbury, a very learned man.

Cratford, Canon of Wells, died in Spain. *

[Burford and Copsell, Canons of Wells, live at (?)—] †

Tresham, Doctor of Divinity, Canon of Christ Church, Oxford, a distinguished confessor, both under Edward VI and now.

Atkinson, notwithstanding the queen's prohibition, preached fearlessly. Being now in confinement, he writes to his friends that he rejoices to suffer something for the faith, but what he suffers seems to him very little. He always had a soul worthy of martyrdom.

Rambridge, Doctor and [. . . .], with many other priests was lately thrown into the Tower of London, because he had said Mass contrary to the injunctions of the queen and parliament.

(269) Of those Religious who have suffered for the faith.

Feckenham, Abbot of Westminster, near London, was expelled from his house with all his monks and himself shut up in the Tower of London. On being offered pardon and his liberty without being obliged to communicate, if he would only attend at public prayers in church, he replied, "When I shall be of your sect I will attend your prayers." Then the whole family of St Benedict under this leader was ejected from its monastery, and was unable to get the queen's permission to cross the sea.

The Carthusians under Chauncey, a remarkable man, having obtained leave of the queen, all passed into Flanders.

To the Franciscans, in going over the sea, this remarkable chance befell, that whereas the journey from London to Antwerp usually takes three days, or at least two, they accomplished it in twenty-four hours, even though they were delayed on the way.

The monks and nuns of the Order of St Bridget, being turned out of their house, were received in Flanders into a house of other [religious].

The nuns of the Order of St Dominic crossed over in charge of the excellent Father Richard, the Dominican, though some of them had attained the age of eighty years, among whom is the sister of the venerable Bishop of Rochester, herself a woman worthy of respect. The illustrious Count of Feria, a Spaniard, ambassador for King Philip in England, obtained leave for all these to quit the kingdom.

Langton, a Benedictine monk, has recently escaped into Flanders.

(270[b]) What the University of Oxford has suffered for the faith.

In the first place six heads of the greater colleges were deprived:

1. Reynolds, warden of Merton, died in prison.
2. Belser, president of St John's and canon of Christ Church, Oxford.
3. Slithurst, president of Trinity, died in prison.
4. Chedsey, president of Corpus.
5. Henshaw, rector of Lincoln.
6. Wright, master of Balliol.

Secondly, when the visitors sought for confirmation of their visitation from the University, the proctor, Edward Bromborough, very freely stated that he would not approve schismatical doings. Simpson, [Dawkins?], Smith and Delahide, an Irishman, spoke in the same sense, and these five were shut up in prison. These things were done in public.

On the visitors going to the colleges severally, they did not obtain oath or subscription from one in twenty. I will relate what happened in one college which is very well known to me, because I belonged to it, and hence what happened in others may be conjectured. I speak of the College of the Blessed Virgin, commonly called "New." From this, first of all, there departed ten priests, who were chaplains; then the six senior fellows professed the faith with such freedom that they were placed in custody—Bromborough, Rastall, Fox, Giblett, Dirrham and Davis, all learned and very good men. The visitors were unwilling to call more, because they heard that they would find the same constancy in fifty others. So, having recourse to flattery, they begged them merely to go to church, doing which they should be free from the oath, subscription and all penalties. Fourteen have crossed the sea from this college, and many others besides have left who were unable or unwilling to cross the sea.

Lastly, out of a hundred persons who belonged to the choir, never yet have even ten been induced to receive the schismatical communion at Easter.

(272) What the University of Cambridge suffered for the faith.

There were expelled four heads of houses:

1. Bullock, master of St John's.
2. Taylor, master of Christ's.
3. Pecock, president of Queen's.
4. Young, D.D., who often under Edward VI disputed with the arch-heretic Bucer. Now being Master of Pembroke Hall, he is ejected.

There withdrew from the single college of Trinity sixteen priests, some of whom went over the sea; others went to their friends, and many other learned men withdrew from other colleges. Lastly, there was manifested so much constancy of every kind in the students that bribes and flattery were needful to gain them. Even the laws were dispensed in their favour, so that while for others the ecclesiastical offices are said in the vulgar tongue, they are allowed to retain the Latin.

What Schoolmasters suffered for the faith.

Thomas Hide, head master of the great school at Winchester, was ejected.

Freeman, master of the London school, when the visitors suggested that by taking the oath he could provide for himself and his wife, she came forward and said: "My dear husband, I will beg for the two of us."

Harris, who had been secretary to Sir Thomas More, and was master of Bristol School, was deprived of his post and of his living.

Bennet, master of Salisbury School, though very poor, preferred to be ejected than to abjure the faith.

Sebastian, the organist of St Paul's in London, was willing to be turned out, but being a great favourite of Elizabeth, he was allowed to retain his post in the Church without doing anything schismatical.

These are the principal schools, and the same may be understood of many others.

(272[b]) What Laymen have suffered for the faith.

All the judges who act in criminal cases asked the queen with one voice to be absolved from the necessity of abjuring the supremacy of the Pope, otherwise as the oath was against their conscience they could not discharge the duties of their office. The queen, having none among her Lutherans to supply this very important class, was obliged to dispense them from the oath.

A certain Dyer refused the office of high chancellor because he would not administer it in schism.

Anthony Browne, a noble viscount [Lord Montague].

Edward Waldegrave, who had been one of Mary's council,

Thomas White and Robert Throgmorton, Masters of Requests.

Fryer, a doctor.

Storey, doctor of civil law, with a great many others, were in some cases deprived of their offices, and in others cast into prison. Storey won great praise for his speech in Parliament in favour of the supremacy of the Pope.

Etheridge, professor of Greek literature at Oxford, was removed from his chair for being a Catholic.

Lord Hastings, Sir Thomas Wharton, Sir Thomas Mordaunt, Sir Thomas Stradling, knights, were all lately imprisoned because they are said to have heard Mass.

Rice, Large, [Pooleys], Felton, and ten students of English law, are in prison because they were present at Mass, as well as 160 of the common people.

Martin, a Doctor of Civil Law, is under custody on account of the faith.

Sir John [? Lee] Knight, Shelley and Hervey:

Some of these live abroad in Spain, some in Flanders, and many others.

(273) What Women have suffered for the faith.

1. Lady Jane Dormer lives in Louvain, as it were in exile.

2. Mistress Clements, similarly at Antwerp with all her children.

3. Mistress Clarence, nurse to Queen Mary, lives in banishment in Spain.

4. Lady Waldegrave, 5. Lady [? Argall], 6. Lady Wharton, 7. Lady Hublethorne, 8. Lady [White], all of these wives of knights, are in prison for hearing Mass, besides many others of people whose names, on account of their having no rank, are not recorded.

How the People are affected towards the Catholic faith.

The English common people consist of farmers, shepherds and artisans. The two former are Catholic. Of the others none are schismatics except those who have sedentary occupations, as weavers and shoemakers, and some idle people about the court. The remote parts of the kingdom are still very averse from heresy, as Wales, Devon and Westmorland, Cumberland and Northumberland. As the cities in England are few and small, and as there is no heresy in the country, nor even in the remoter cities, the firm opinion of those capable of judging is that hardly one per cent. of the English people is infected. Hence the Lutherans speak of their followers as "the little flock."

What School-boys have suffered for the faith.

In Winchester school, when the head master was in prison, and the schismatical master called them to the schismatical sermons, they were so far from obeying that they kept away even from the public prayers, and shut themselves up in their dormitories. When he found fault with their disobedience, they asked if he wished to destroy the souls of innocents. Then when the master attempted force, and called in the military commander from the nearest sea-port, about twelve of the boys took to flight; the rest, influenced by the prevalent terror, went most unwillingly to the church. Thus God "out of the mouth of babes and of sucklings has perfected praise"; for in this persecution there is no order, or sex, or age, that has not nobly defended the Catholic faith.

(273[b]) What they suffered for the faith who were appointed to Bishoprics.

1. John Danister, priest, should first be mentioned, because he is the only confessor of those who left the kingdom. In attempting to cross the sea he was apprehended and cast into a most foul prison, and confessed the faith. And when, at about the same time, another priest, who had been lodged in the same prison, had begged his liberty through his friends, the governor of the prison, mistaking the persons, would have let Danister go. But this most honourable man declined to make use of the permission which was offered, and pointed out the man who ought to be released. The governor, admiring his uprightness, continued to deal with the Council until he obtained freedom for Danister as well. This man, a Winchester boy, who afterwards studied at Oxford, surpassed all his contemporaries in writing verse and poetry of all kinds. As a young man he surpassed in literary studies and in civil law, and now finally that he is grown up, he excels in theology. Of his skill in this he gave an example at Louvain, where he preached last Lent with great applause. On account of his gravity he was always called Cato.

2. Maurice Clenock. Although he had had licence to leave the kingdom, he was afterwards deprived of all his benefices. A man of the greatest integrity. No one is unaware how much labour this man underwent for the faith. He was named Bishop of Bangor by Queen Mary and Cardinal Pole. He was a doctor of civil law.

3. Gilbert Burfurd, Canon of Wells. He studied theology at Oxford. He was superior to Danister in scholastic learning, but inferior to him in eloquence and knowledge of law. He was grave and an excellent man of business.

(274) 4. William Taylor made great progress in theology at Cambridge. He was head of Christ's College. A man of great soul, unless perchance he be overcome by prospects of promotion.

5. Giles Capel, a Canon of Wells, a man not less deserving of honour on account of learning than on account of his wonderful modesty and probity; yet in theology he was learned enough.

6. Henry Joliffe, Dean of Bristol; not unlearned, but chiefly praiseworthy for his zeal in the Catholic faith, though this may be said of all.

Conclusion

These few things, most illustrious Cardinal, I have briefly set down, that writing somewhat of each order and degree I might at least enable you to judge of similar cases. As I could not name one in a hundred of the priests and scholars, how many thousands of commoners are we to think that there are who "have not bent the knee to Baal"?

Of the things I have written, whether about many or of individuals, I believe them all to be most true. Most of the particulars are attested by numerous letters, which I have read, from excellent men; other details are known to all, a few I have heard from witnesses worthy of credit.

It only remains that your Eminence should promote, as you have hitherto done, the interests of our nation in all things; for at this time, after God and our Holy Father Pope Pius IV, England has no other protector than the most illustrious Cardinal Moroni. To both of you and to our country may Christ, who provides for all, grant welfare, peace and eternal felicity. Amen.

Your humble suppliant,

NICHOLAS SANDER,

Priest by your beneficence.

No. II

OFFICIAL LISTS OF PRISONERS FOR RELIGION DURING THE REIGN OF QUEEN ELIZABETH

IN order to obtain complete returns of all the confessors of the faith imprisoned during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, one would have had to consult the registers of the various prisons. But the old prisons are now swept away, and their registers seem also to have perished. The fullest official returns now attainable are therefore those contained in the various lists which are still to be found at the Record Office and in the British Museum. Hardly any of these have been printed hitherto, and the object of the present collection is to furnish a complete text of all those which are inedited.

It must not, however, be supposed that the Record Office series is complete. Returns were only sent in by wardens and other prison authorities to the Privy Council or the Secretary of State, when special need arose for transferring prisoners, or for making changes in their diet, treatment, etc., or for arranging for their trials and executions. These special occasions occurred when there was some recrudescence of persecution, as happened for instance in the years 1561, 1570, 1580. This explains why we have lists for these years and those immediately following—whilst between them we find blanks in our series. It is not that these blanks mean that there were no prisoners for religion during those times, but that the ordinary prison management was then sufficient for dealing with them without invoking the higher powers of the Privy Council or of the Chief Secretary.

As all the prisons here mentioned (except the Tower) have been destroyed, some of them for many years, a few words as to their nature and locality will be useful.

A considerable number of prisons were in Southwark. The King's Bench, under the court of that name, was at the north of the junction of Newington Causeway with Borough Road. Further up Borough Road to the south of Mermaid Court stood the Marshalsea, under the jurisdiction of the Marshal of the Royal Household, with the small White Lion Prison close by. Continuing up the same road to the junction with Southwark Road we find Counter Court marking the site of the Counter in Southwark. Walking north towards the river one soon reaches Clink Street, so called from the Clink prison, originally part of the Bishop of Winchester's palace (now Winchester Wharf).

If we cross the Thames by Blackfriars Bridge, Bridewell prison would lie immediately to the left. Bridewell Police Station stands on part of its site. Following Farringdon Street past Ludgate Hill, the Fleet prison would be on the right, extending up to Old Bailey on the east, and to Fleet Lane on the north.

The line of Old Bailey brings one to Newgate, and thence passing down Newgate Street to Cheapside one would have the Poultry at the end of the road and Wood Street on the left. In both the latter there was a Counter prison, attached to the Counter or Compter Court of the Lord Mayor. As their name implies, they were intended for debtors. The Counter in the Poultry was "some four doors west of St Mildred's."

The Gatehouse Prison was in the old gate to the close of Westminster Abbey, which faced the two western towers of the church.

V. RETURNS OF THE LONDON PRISONS, MIDSUMMER 1561

Record Office, Domestic Elizabeth, vol. xviii, nn. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

A. THE returns for Newgate (No. 4) give the names of thirty-six condemned for felony. The particular offence is not stated, but there would seem to be no reason for supposing that any of them was confined for religion.

B. The list of prisoners in King's Bench (No. 1) comprises seventy-one names. It is not stated of any that they were confined for religion, except the following:

Robert Downes, Nicholas Busshe and John Sharman; committed to warde by the Councells warrant and after that sent into Essex, to A session holden there, for that they had transgressed the queenes maiesties procedings concerning Religion, and so returned again to the King's Bench.

Thomas Price, prist, committed to warde, the xxvijth of April, Anno 1561, upon the busshopp of London's commaundment.

C. The Marshalsea list (No. 2) contains thirty-four names. The last section contains the names of the prisoners for religion.

31. Doctor Bonner sent in the xx day of Aprill, 1560, vppon the commaundyment of the Lord Archebisshoppe of Canterbury and others the Quene's Maiesties comissyoners, viz: for matters of Religion.
32. Thomas Wood, clerk, sent in the xiij daye of Maye, 1560, vppon the commaundyment of the Lord Archbisshoppe of Canterbury and others the Quenes Maiesties comissyoners, viz: for matters of Relygion.

VI. QUESTIONS AS TO THE PRISONERS IN THE TOWER, PROPOSED BY THE LIEUTENANT

JUNE 14, 1562

Record Office, Domestic Elizabeth, vol. xxiii, 40.

THERE are no returns of prisoners during the year 1562 but this, and the list of prisoners in the Tower in September, which has already been printed in John Bayley, History and Antiquities of the Tower (1821), i, 91. This gives the names of the well-to-do prisoners who were able to pay their own expenses, viz., Lady Catherine Gray and the Earls of Hertford and Lennox, Sir Thomas Stradling and Henry Howard, as also John Keyle, James Goldborne, Francis Saunders, Robert Godderde. But John Poole and George Thorneton, mentioned below, had by then been released.

Motions made to the Lordes of the Counsell by the Lieutenaunt of the Toure for prisoners there, ye xiiijth of June 1562.

ffirste he puttithe yo^{r} Lordeships in remembrance that the late bishops w^{t} m^{r} ffecknam and m^{r} Boxall beinge all viij in nombre, be close & severallie kept, ffor the which they continuallie call vppon him to make in their names humble sute to have more libertie, informinge your Lordeships therewith howe troublesome it is to serve so many persons severally so longe togither.

He hathe also in custodie Francis Yaxley, George Chamberlaine, Thomas Valence and Arthure Lallarde, all close and severallie kept and woulde knowe your pleasures if none of theise persons maye not be brought and served togither, or [if] not, w^{ch} of them maye be served togither.

He hath also Leonarde Bilson clerke, whoo, hathe made ij supplications to yo^{r} Lordeships not to yo^{r} contentacions. He is deprived of the best of his livinges. If it might stande w^{t} yo^{r} pleasures somethinge to beare w^{t} him in respect of his longe enprisonment, I thinke it were a charitable deede.

He hathe also John Poole and George Thorneton to whome it hath pleased the Quenes ma^{ie} to grante her pardon, w^{ch} beinge drawen hathe remayned longe in the handes of the m^{r} of y^{e}

Requests redie to be signed. It may please yo^{r} Lordeships to helpe to further the same in respect of their longe enprisonment.

Mystres Copynge my Ladie Katherins gentlewoman hathe diverse things verie necessarie of her owne to be done, and makithe humble sute that she maye have licens to goe and come, to doe the same, or ells that she maye have licence to departe and my Ladie to have some other in her place. Ffor she shall ells not be able to live for want of orderinge of suche poore things as she hathe.

Pleasithe it yo^{r} Lordeships to vnderstande, that for diverse of theise persons, their dietts dothe lie vppon my charge, and their long abode will make them never able to paye the same. Wherof I have thought good to put yo^{u} in remembrance, submittinge me to yo^{r} further ordre herin.

IX. PRISONERS IN THE TOWER, JUNE 14, 1572.

British Museum, Lansdowne MSS., vol. lxxiij, No. 16.

AFTER the so-called Ridolfi conspiracy the Tower was filled with prisoners, conservatives and friends of Mary Stuart of both the religions, protestant as well as catholic. Chief among these was the Duke of Norfolk, who was eventually executed. Our paper was drawn up just after this to enable Lord Burghleigh to decide what should done be with the remainder of the prisoners--and the notes printed in italics give his resolutions.

In Bayley's History of the Tower vol. ii, p. lvii, another list is printed, composed somewhat later, but referring to the beginning of the year 1572. It contains the names of the Duke of Norfolk, and those of Barners and Mathers, who were executed on the 11th of February and 2nd of June respectively, and are therefore absent from our list. It does not contain the name of Queen Mary's adherent, Thomas Morgan, who was not imprisoned till March (Dict. Nat. Biog.). It gives the names Mr Cantrell and Mr Jones, which may correspond with "the priest Allwey," and "Barker's man," who come last in our list. In other respects the two lists agree.

Prisoners in the Tower, the xiiijt of June, 1572.

The Earle of Southampton: Afor ye Pardon.

The L. Lvmley: Is endyted of misprision of treason, and is to be tryed by his peirs.

XI. LIST OF PRISONERS FOR ECCLESIASTICAL CAUSES FROM 1577 TO 1580

Record Office, Domestic Elizabeth, vol. 140, nn 36, 37, 38, 39, 40; vol. 141, 1. DURING the summer of this year a return had been asked from the keepers of the prisoners for ecclesiastical causes who had been committed during the last three years. But the returns for the Marshalsea appear to give only those who were actually in prison at the time. Six returns remain in the Record Office. Those for Newgate, the Fleet, the Clink and the Counter in Southwark are missing.

THE CONCLUSION OF THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF FATHER WILLIAM WESTON, S.J.

[THE late Father John Morris, S.J., in the Second Series of his Troubles of our Catholic Forefathers printed an English translation of the autobiography of Father Weston from the original autograph at Stonyhurst, as far as that manuscript went. A considerable number of pages, however, were missing at the end, and it was my good fortune to make up the loss, from a complete copy preserved in a Jesuit archive abroad, Anglia Historica, vol. 1, p. 550, etc. The translation is from the pen of the Rev. Father Joseph Rickaby, S.J.

In the published portion of his autobiography Father Weston—omitting all mention of his birth at Maidstone in 1550, and of his studies at Oxford, Paris, Rome, Cordova and Seville—begins his story with his landing in England in September, 1584. He describes his adventures, exorcisms, experiences, missionary labours, and finally his capture in 1586, examinations and imprisonment first in the Clink, then, 1588, in Wisbeach Castle. Prison treatment was at first severe, but on November 16, 1592 (Acts of Privy Council), the régime was rearranged on the model of the Fleet, where prisoners were better used. A good deal of liberty was now allowed, and in course of time the majority of the priests, with Weston at their head, adopted a sort of college life in prison. But the minority strongly opposed this: sides were taken, and the division gradually deepened into the well-known "Wisbeach Stirs." It is from this point that the story is here taken up. We must regret that, as indicated in the third paragraph, the writer thought it better to leave the account of the troubles "to the narration of others."—J.H.P.]

I was kept in this prison [Wisbeach] nearly eleven whole years, of which for six or so, if I remember right, I was close shut up; the other five I spent in a little greater liberty in company with others. When our former keeper had been removed by a hideous death, another was appointed in his place. This man wanted to make himself out to be of gentle stock because he had been for some time in the household of William Cecil the Treasurer, by whose favour and influence he had obtained a Government appointment as Justice of the Peace. This man I say got the care of looking after us, an office of no great labour, carrying with it many rich yearly perquisites and revenues. He took himself for no mere keeper of the prison, but by virtue of the authority which he had over laymen he trusted that it was within his competence and part of his duty to hear and deal with us also and our cases, any that occurred. Nay he had also supporters whom he should not have had, who favoured, not to say fostered, these attempts and designs of his, saying that all businesses and disputes of priests—apart I mean from causes of religion and faith—ought to be settled and composed by the civil laws and the Queen's ordinances; and that consequently it should not appear strange if our governor, who was also a magistrate and a justice, should hear and decide such controversies. To many, and to me among them, this opinion and sentiment of theirs seemed more than unworthy and iniquitous, whether it was for winning grace and favour that they had taken it up, or whether they really thought so in their hearts; and this cause alienated me still further from the keeper and occasioned complaints of me to the Queen and her counsellors. It was said besides—let them who invented this story see what justice there is in it—that I had received from Cardinal Cajetan a secret dispatch, which was said to contain, amongst other matters, a plot for the murder of the Queen, and of another person, who was certainly neither a prince nor a principal man, except that the author of that lie thought he should not have made provision enough for the dignity of that man—as though the person in question were a second father and guardian of the republic and common weal—unless along with the Queen's name he had his partnership in the common danger of death. [I do not care] to name the man, although his name has not gone unmentioned in this very connexion in a book printed and published in England.

The pursuivants who conducted me with others from Wisbeach to London—of which matter presently—assured me privately that the causes of my removal were that I was managing and favouring the Spanish interest, and at the same time gave me the names of the men who were the authors of this accusation. The commissioners appointed to try the causes of Catholics, when I was standing before them for examination, besides all these counts, brought up against me others, of which I will speak presently in the proper place in the order of my narrative. I think it was the importunate complaints of these malicious persons that cast me into that Tower [of London]. They thought that only when I was away and my mouth shut, could they freely venture to resolve on any point of the designs they had on hand. So much for the affairs of Wisbeach.

In my next letter Your Reverence may look for some account of the preparation and manner of my journey to the Tower of London, that putting an end at length to such a long narrative I may satisfy the command of Your Reverence and of our Father Superior. Any other things that may have happened at Wisbeach or in the Tower, and that I do not think good to insert here, had better either be omitted entirely, or I had rather leave the narration of them to others.

At the end of the year '99, I think it was, the members of the royal council decreed that I and three others should be deported to London. They did this by sending a letter and a command to the

Justices to whom they had entrusted the care of visiting the prison when needful. They watched for an hour and a time, as their way is, when they were most likely to catch us off our guard and suspecting nothing. It was just dinner time, we were all in the refectory, just sitting down, but having yet tasted nothing, when word came that the Justice was at the door with a great number of men. He did not enter the place, but showing himself standing at the door and putting in his head, he called me first, bidding me come out. When I came out, he handed me over to two or three of his retinue to lead away at once, and keep me faithfully in a secret place of the prison, so that none should have access to address or have any dealings with me. Then he calls out two priests, Christopher Southworth and Giles Archer, and Thomas Pound a gentleman. These also he handed over to the like custody and not less vigilance in guarding them. Immediately he makes his way into every one's bedroom, and there they rummaged everything, books and letters, or any other writings, or anything else they found in the way of relics and images, sparing nothing either sacred or profane. However, they did not light on the sacred vestments or chalices, for of those things we always had great care and forethought, not to leave them in obvious and open places, but to lay them up in the utmost secrecy immediately after the daily use and service. We learnt a moderate amount of care from being quite accustomed to their craft by daily experience. When they had searched and rummaged to their hearts' content, they gave us notice of our journey to London, that we should make ourselves ready to start by the morrow. All that day and the following night we were severally kept in separate places under special guards. The guards assigned to me let me know in a friendly way that, immediately upon my arrival in London, I should be cast into the Tower of London, so that I might first meditate in my own mind anything that I should like to think of or consider beforehand. In fact they treated me very kindly, and did not hinder any one who wanted to come to me or speak to me privately. The morning dawned, on which again we were made a spectacle to the world and to men, for a countless multitude of people flocked to the castle within and without to see the sight. Meanwhile horses were made ready, and nine or ten guards, who were to accompany us for the whole journey and conduct us to Court. It was also part of their office and care to prevent our holding private conversations with one another, or speaking to one another except before witnesses. And when, after the attentions of those who busied themselves and laboured much about us, we had mounted our horses amid many spectators, and with many soldiers accompanying us, had done about half a league's journey, they sent a swift horseman to catch us up and despoil us of our bags, into which we had flung such things as gowns, shirts, and a few other absolute necessaries, a precious consignment considering that we had to make a stay. They thought we had carried off some things secretly; and, now that we had been caught unexpectedly, they hoped they must discover our fraud. We ceased not to continue our journey. The horseman, returned with the like speed with which he had come, along with our baggage. We found that our breviaries alone had been made booty of; for there was nothing else that could please them, or was worth plundering.

Not long after on the highway there met us two of those people called pursuivants, sent with authority from the Council for the very work that had been done upon us, of deporting us to London, and of searching most diligently the bedrooms of all and the courts of the prison. Finding themselves anticipated in this business, they did not trouble to proceed further, but joined our company.

Henceforward I was given over to these two guardians. They clung almost continually to my side and did not leave my room at night. It was winter time, with a good deal of rain and cold: the roads were muddy; and whenever we came to our inn there was question of warming and drying our clothes. The rest of my companions also had each his separate bedroom, with special keepers appointed to look after him. I laid myself out to be civil to my keepers, bidding them make themselves a good fire, and, while supper was being got ready, to have a cup of wine brought them or something else, and that I would pay all costs. We had laboured the whole day on a hard journey, without dinner and almost fasting. Also, while they were busy looking after the horses, I took their cloaks and spread them to the fire. By these and similar attentions I gained the good will of both. "Beware of my mate," said one of them, "he is a great knave; don't trust him with anything that might turn to your injury": and the other told me as much about him. They also brought against one another instances enough to create a just suspicion of singular knavery. To be sure, there was no need of their doing that, for their evil occupation of pursuivants for the persecution of Catholics was of itself enough to show how little goodness there was in either of them. One might without scruple of rash judgement think them wicked in no ordinary degree. They told me the reasons why I had been sent for, because I was much devoted to the Spanish interest, and had defended it privately and before company, even in public disputations; and how the priests at Wisbeach were divided into divers factions touching the succession, some standing for the Spaniard, others for the Scot, and so were at variance. These most grievous heads of accusation forsooth, beyond which calumny could not go, had deservedly excited the members of the Council against me and caused my being sent for! They named also the principal parties, authors of the accusation, and mentioned many other things which certainly could never have come to the ears of the heretics without the manifest betrayal of some. So in these conversations with them I spent a good part of the journey; and thanks to the favour that I had with them they allowed me to converse privately with others, so that they kept watch at the door while I heard someone's confession, protesting at the same time that they would not have it happen for a great sum of money "that any of yon rascals should have found you talking privately together." Though I doubt not that they said this by way of exaggerating the small favour they did me in granting this boon,* still I was not ignorant that they had been most ill-behaved to others in conducting them—they had been put in the company of their prisoners against the will of the latter—from which conducting they hoped to find an occasion of great gain, once this business of deportation was wholly entrusted to their sole care and management.

At last in three days we arrived at London, and were carried from our inn without delay to the Court; and, all bespattered with dirt and mud from our journey, I dare say we afforded the courtiers a sight. For two full hours at least we remained in suspense, waiting for a decision. At last, after long deliberation, [the Council] sent us away without even seeing us. Here I cannot omit to mention a thing that happened there. My companions finding the delay long, one of them under stress of cold would sometimes interrupt the protracted sitting by putting in a short walk. On my attempting to do this, some decayed courtier with his arms akimbo, as I was walking in line between my two keepers, executed what he thought a high-spirited charge upon me with the whole breadth of his person. Seeing the man coming, I stepped out of my place and made way for him. As I returned, in the sight of many, he received me with the same rudeness. I yielded and retired, giving place to his ill-will. Perhaps he thought that priests and Jesuits, who among them are more despised than the dregs of the rabble, and are so hateful to all ranks, had demeaned themselves too highly, considering they were at Court; and that not only they should not have dared to walk but not even to raise their eyes and look at anyone. On being dismissed to our inn, we returned with all our guard accompanying us.

When then we had come from the Court to our inn, and had had supper, and the hour itself and protracted fatigue had invited us to retire to rest, two royal servants were suddenly sent from Court to hurry us off without delay to prison. One of them came to my room, with no small crowd of attendants, and laying his hands on me said: "I arrest you in the Queen's name." "Why," said I, "there's no need of that; I've been the Queen's prisoner these many years." Said he: "I must search you carefully, to see whether you carry any arms or letters with you or in your baggage." When he had done that, going over all parts and corners of my dress and bag, he fastened a rope about my arm and said: "Come along with me: you're to be taken to the Tower of London." They did the same thing in the same way with the priest Giles Archer. Our other two companions were carried off to other and separate prisons. We two, I going before, and he following with his guard, were thus led and dragged through a long street of the city. At last we came to the Tower, and were presented before the lieutenant. He asked me many questions, especially about Father Gerard, who had escaped from him a few months before, saying what a deal he would give to have been able to catch him again. Thereupon he called two keepers, and they assigned us to our proper wards. So we embraced, and taking what we thought a last farewell of one another, we are led away. What happened to my companion I do not know; but some strange lot of mine brought me into the hands of another plunderer. For as soon as I was thrust into that place, at once there comes a fellow up to me; "You are Edmund," he says, "you are a Jesuit, and I serve the Queen, and have for my duty to use you and the like of you as you deserve. Give up, to begin with, your cross; for your sort are not wont to go about without crosses and rosaries and medals." And striking both hands violently upon my breast, with one onset he rends my dress from the top to my feet. "Where is that cross?" he says, and most diligently searches the remainder of my person and clothes; "I will rather unstitch you than lose my chance of finding your cross." He comes upon it at last, and, sated with his prey, ceases to vex me further.*

I was now wondering what new accusation they would bring against me, and what witnesses they would produce. But they gave me a long respite; and, after some weeks of anxiety and care on my part as to what would happen, still nothing was done. When at last they summoned me and brought me before commissioners, first of all, after the usual interrogatories of my name, birthplace, place of education, where I had been ordained deacon and priest, they wanted to tender me an oath to answer truly and sincerely to the several enquiries that were to follow. I told them to propose any question they liked, and that without any obligation on oath I would answer them in all lawful particulars; as for the things unlawful, that I would not confess them even on oath. "Come now," they say, "our present business with you is not about religion, nor about your having come into the realm, priest and Jesuit as you are, against the provisions of the laws and the Queen's will, nor do we urge the Masses that you have said since your coming in, nor ask what houses you have made your way into, nor whom you have reconciled and led away from the Queen to the Pope's party. We clear you of fear and danger on all these counts; there is a graver matter of accusation against you, more nearly affecting your life." Then they put forward against me in order four chief heads of accusation: that I had kept in my possession seditious books treating perniciously of the state of the kingdom, especially that book ascribed to Father Persons, which laid down conclusions about the right and title of succession: that the priests of Wisbeach fostered parties and factions among themselves, yea and held public disputations and daily discourses on these titles,

* The date of Fr. Weston's consignment to the Tower may be fixed by the warrant of December 19, 1599 in the Privy Council Registers, addressed to the Lieutenant for his "close imprisonment. On the 21st William Ball and six others received an order for £14 for their expenses in bringing him up from Wisbeach. On the 24th orders were given for Weston to be examined with "extraordinary care." (Ibid.)

some adhering to one successor, others to another, and that I was the head of the Spanish faction; that I was aware of the approach of that huge fleet of the Spaniards against England, and did not disclose the same; besides that, having information beforehand by messengers and letters of one or two other hostile naval descents of theirs, now upon England, now upon Ireland, I held my peace. There were also other parts of the accusation like these, which neither mind nor memory can suffice to rehearse. They told me many things of the troubles at Wisbeach, naming both facts and persons, things which I should have wished certainly to have been kept within the walls of the prison, dead and buried in silence, rather than have been brought to the knowledge of the heretics with so great note of infamy and scorn. Finally, being unable to extort any of the information that they desired or expected, they remanded me to prison with a load of insults and reproaches. Though, considering the variety and multitude of their remarks, they showed themselves masters of the art of abusive language, still, I think, with that inborn hatred of theirs, they grieved that something was wanting and not enough had been said against me. I do not speak of all of them, for there were some who kept their tongues quiet, if not for modesty, still from a sense of the dignity of their character and position. Yet even of these, one who had wished to wear an air of more virtuous reserve, threatened to force blood from my nails and the ends of my fingers, a sufficient hint of torture and the torment of the rack to frighten me. So I was shut up again in my place, and lay expecting every hour and every moment the sentence of death. The time and place were well suited for prayer, and even for reading and study, had not my eyes failed me. I lost the sight of one of them altogether. The other was more than half put out by a cloud that was forming over it. Thus I was brought almost to the verge of blindness. Sleep too had nearly vanished in consequence of an inveterate headache. In fact I hardly got any, so that for intervals of eight, nine, or ten days and more I only slept two or three hours, and that by means of sleeping-draughts: thus I suffered from most grievous and continual inflammation of head and eyes. These evils were to me the occasion of far greater calamity and pain than the weariness of the prison, or the narrowness of its walls, or the intense solitude and entire exclusion and separation from worldly things.

Before my eyes there was carried out for burial, in mean style enough, a Catholic who had endured this wretched prison with great vigour of mind and constancy—if I am not mistaken—for eleven whole years. His name was Humerston. As my keeper told me, he had a very stern man appointed to guard him, who besides many other things used to beat him and cudgel him most cruelly. Under these and the other almost endless miseries of this prison—filth, confinement, solitude, hunger, scourges or cudgels—he had gone out of his mind, and for utter prostration of body and limb for nearly three years before his death he had been so bedridden, that he could not even turn over on his side without help, and that was very seldom afforded him. The same keeper further told me about this Humerston that his father, a heretic, had got leave of the Queen to take his son out of prison and bring him home. But, for all his father's asking and repeated and urgent entreaties, he never could be induced to yield to his prayers, saying that he preferred to die gloriously in prison for the faith, in the midst of all those evils, with a more certain hope of salvation, than to live with a heretic, even a parent, not without danger to his salvation, an unavoidable danger among heretics, whose crafty persuasions, blandishments and other noxious arts he could not escape.

Not unlike this was the case of another gentleman, an example of excellence of faith, who was held captive in the cell next mine, though separated by thick walls and many locks and bolts of doors. He had held a high command in the Catholic army against the heretics in Flanders, and had fought bravely for several years. Returning to England on business, he had fallen into the hands of the heretics, and on examination had answered as a Catholic, yet somewhat too boldly as a soldier, and so had been thrust into the Tower. There I found him at my entrance, bearing his five years imprisonment with constancy, though weighed down with much infirmity and want. A little before my departure from the fortress, his mother wanted to take him out, having got leave to that effect, after many labours and expenses and employment of intercessors with the Queen. But he would not accept the favour, not to be forced to avow that he had offended against the Sovereign and her laws in departing from the kingdom without her leave, this avowal being the one condition fixed for his liberation from prison. For whereas he had gone out in the cause of religion and conscience, in which he recognized no offence, he refused to declare himself penitent and sorry for doing so. And so bravely did he stand to his resolution, that all the repeated prayers and tears of his mother, sisters or friends, who visited him daily and tried to shake his constancy, could never turn him from his purpose.

I will tell a story, perhaps not altogether unamusing, though my narrative digresses to that extent out of its course. Let the credibility of the tale rest with the teller: I will tell it as it was told to me. After two years' confinement in this fortress I got another keeper, who used to visit me periodically and bring me necessaries. Said I to him: "These are long nights, especially in this solitude and darkness, particularly now in winter time: let me have the means of lighting a lamp, steel and tinder: I wonder that Trench" (so he was called) "my former keeper, when I asked him so often, refused me this favour." "No wonder he refused, and not without reason," was the reply; "for one of our prisoners not many months ago abused these means to contrive his escape." Then he began to tell me the story. This man was a Catholic, though not imprisoned in this place for the Catholic faith. After long and endless imprisonments, after his cause had been heard and examined, judgement apparently having fallen asleep, and the sentence having slipped beyond the memory of man, thinking himself buried in the tomb and darkness of the prison, he began to revolve in his mind what counsels of art and industry he should take up or put in execution by way of effecting his escape. Being then a skilled workman, he made a toothed file of wrought iron, and with this he began gradually to file and wear away the iron bars. At last, working at it every day, he opened to himself a way of getting out, scaled the walls, crossed the moat by swimming, and escaped. Next day the keeper came in, observed his absence and flight, and gave notice. The fact was cried all over the city, and diligent search was made. Meanwhile he had accomplished by walking a distance of two leagues outside the city. He stopped on the way in the shop of a certain glover to buy a pair of gloves. A passer-by, who had left London the same morning, looking at the man, and seeing him wet through, said, "The crier's voice was all over the city to-day, that some prisoner had escaped from the Tower: he could not have got off except by scaling the walls and swimming the moat: here I see a man with his clothes soaked; see whether he perhaps be the man." They arrest him and lead him back. The fact is looked into and ascertained; and they once more shut him up laden with many irons; and besides they fasten him by a long chain to a wooden post set up in the midst of his cell. He endured these evils constantly for many days with difficult and protracted patience. Afterwards, when they thought him sufficiently chastised for his escapade, they released him from the chains and irons and left him free in his cell. The memory of the event was buried, and things seemed to have reverted to their former situation.

He however did not acquiesce, but began again to agitate new designs; and as the secret of the file had not yet been found out, by the same art as before, he opened to himself a way. But as the wall that he had to descend was higher than the other, he carried with him a rope—wherever he got that from—and thereby slips down. But as the rope was too short, and left a good distance to the surface of the water, he lets go and allows himself to fall into the moat, not however without some splash and noise, which the watchmen on the other side heard in the silence of the night, and suspecting some one's escape from the Tower, they run hither and thither. He watches his opportunity carefully, comes out of the water, and takes to his heels. Feeling himself pursued, he begins to shout "This way, this way he goes." The pursuer who followed next on his footsteps, and rivalled him for the credit of the capture of the runaway, runs the harder of the two, catches him up, and lays a hand on his shoulder to hold him back a moment till he could get before him; but feeling his clothes wet, he says, "Why, you are the fellow, stop your running!" So they seize and drag him again, thrust him back into prison, and keep him with much greater watchfulness and care. But after a considerable length of time a new thought of art and stratagem occurs to him, as he was a very dexterous man in designing and fashioning things. First of all he took up a custom of never saluting his keeper as the latter came in and went out, but would turn away his face to the window as if lost in thought. Meanwhile he had manufactured for himself many things which he thought would be most useful for his purpose of escape. When the day came for attempting his flight, he had made an image of himself in a long gown, such as himself used to wear, and with the head covered with a hat or cap, leaning at the window, so that when the keeper came in and saw that appearance, he should think it nothing unusual, but the same man who always stood there, dumb and with his face turned away. Meanwhile he turns himself into another man, the very image of a blacksmith, in dress and look, with tools partly carried in his hand, partly hanging from his belt. When the keeper came in at the usual time, and hastened to put the things that he was carrying in the customary place, he, who had been hiding behind the door, silently slips out, without the keeper knowing or being aware of the fraud, and makes for the stairs and goes down. But by chance a woman had passed that way. When she saw a man at a place and a time at which no one was allowed, unless accompanied by a keeper, "And you, my good man," she says, "who are you, and where do you come from?" He answered that he had been doing some smith's work upstairs. "But," says she, "it's not customary to visit the cells of these prisoners except in company with their keepers: stand that we may see who you are." During this conversation the keeper is summoned. "Do you know," says the woman, "this man? He has just come downstairs by the same way as you." The keeper looking hard at him, and recognizing him at length with difficulty from his altered habit and countenance, "Ho, ho," he says, "will you never give up your tricks? come along with me." Once more he is plunged into his prison, from which, however, after one or two years, on his keeper's giving security that he would be a loyal subject of the Queen—for he had been suspected of some crime and attempt against the government—he obtains his gratuitous discharge.

I remained where I was until the death of the Queen, much enfeebled by loss of sight and sleep, so that neither were my days pleasant nor my nights tolerable. Utterly wearied as my mind and senses were by continued occupation and watching, such nights made death desirable for me rather than life. During this time, however, I got leave from the lieutenant of the Tower to mount sometimes on to the roof of my cell to get a little fresh air. He gave me the leave on condition of my pledging my word not to attempt to escape. The lieutenant only saw me twice in the whole five years, and that not for my sake, but as he was on other business in that part of the prison. There was no need of my promising, since the situation itself afforded abundant security against that danger, so that even if one did choose to throw himself headlong, he could not escape unhurt. But though this was some boon to me, nevertheless it was associated with so many great inconveniences as not to be a pleasure. I was actually shut out of my cell, often even far into the night, exposed to cold, wind, rain, and even snow, with no means of escaping these inclemencies of the weather but the protection of a slight covering with many rents. I say nothing of the frequent peltings I came in for from coigns of vantage, and the hissings and the other signs of hatred and contempt that were given me when they saw me walking there. Someone, however, catching sight of me from a high place—led by what sentiment or spirit I know not—showered on me some silver coins. I heard them jingling as they fell near me, but let them lie, as not at all caring for them or even looking at them. Then said he, "Won't you take them, sir?" Then thinking them to be a gift proceeding from a friendly and benevolent soul, I returned thanks and began picking some of them up.

About this time was excited and set on foot the tragedy of the earl of Essex, which was all dissolved and extinguished along with the same earl. I will say in a few words what happened before my eyes as I had a view of it from my cell. I was sitting solitary and faint in the further part of my room, when I heard an unwonted running about of crowds of hurrying men, and the clash of arms and mingled cries, as lances, coats of mail, and muskets were carried past. I went to the window to see the new event. Beneath me was the street that leads to the public magazine of all sorts of arms. I could make out a great multitude of men coming and going, carrying different kinds of arms, with great display and all possible speed. Threats were also interposed for this or that to be done as quickly as possible under pain of death. I could not sufficiently wonder at the business, what that sudden running about meant, what was the danger of the Sovereign or of the city or of the fortress, what occasion called for such headlong haste and the dragging out of so much ammunition and brass cannon. Supper time at last came, and the keeper who brought me my usual meal appeared in helmet and shirt of mail, with a battle-axe in one hand and my dish in the other. He was an amazing sight. "What is this new face and condition of things? why this clash of arms and hurrying to and fro of armed men?" "We are undone," he said; "we are all betrayed together. The earl of Essex, with nearly all the nobility of the whole kingdom, has taken up wicked arms against the Queen." Thus much he said at a gasp, put down my supper, and tore off. In these domestic commotions, what else could I expect, if he had told me the truth, but the immediate siege and capture of the Tower? However, in a very few hours all this stage-effect ceased and was quelled. The man was surrounded and captured in his own house, with some of the nobility. About the following midnight he was carried to the Tower. After some days he was beheaded, not far out of view of my window. A large scaffold was erected, and he was led forth with two or three of his Gospel ministers. They were at him all night exhorting him to die. He first made a long speech about the Queen's clemency to him, and his ingratitude to her, and the crime that he had plotted; and then laid his head on the block, paying the just penalty for his wicked life and youth. So the unhappy earl came to his end.

A few other partners to his conspiracy were executed in various places: many more redeemed their lives at a price.

These times passed. But the Queen was now an old woman, and the number of her years had exhausted alike the strength of her body and the vices of her younger days; and, as I heard, grief for the earl's death so weighed down her mind, that unable to rise up from so many afflictions she was fain to submit to death. I need not relate to Your Reverence the events of those times and the circumstances of her death. Even if I wished I could not tell much, so closely was I shut up away from the conversation of men and the knowledge of those affairs. I could know nothing except what my keeper chose of his own accord to tell me. I can only testify that during those few days in which she lay dying and all hope was lost, a wonderful silence crept over the whole city, as though in time of interdict and cessation of divine offices, so that no sound was heard of bells or trumpets, of which they make very frequent use. She died about midnight on the eve of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin.

The very next day about the eighth or ninth hour, so carefully and expeditiously had the members of the Privy Council worked out the calculation, the new King James of Scotland was proclaimed in the principal street of London. Thence they came to the Tower, repeating and publishing with great pomp the same proclamation. The thing was done in view of my window, and [I could see] the order and manner of the proceedings. Messengers meanwhile were dispatched to Scotland. King James resolved to make no delay; and, quickly putting the affairs of his kingdom and household in such timely order as he could, he hastened to England.

Meanwhile our Tower and fortress had to be prepared for him, as this is the most ancient seat and palace of the King. On the occasion sundry prisoners were released from prison, those especially whose causes had been better examined, and as it were put out of date by lapse of time. Amongst others this was also my lot. There came one of the King's household in the King's name, who signified the pleasure of the Sovereign that I should be released, bidding at the same time the keeper to allow my friends access to me till preparations for my departure were complete. He answered that he had taken me in charge not without a written warrant, bidding me to be kept in close custody till the lords of the Council resolved otherwise, and that without a similar warrant he could not release me or give me any greater liberty. So I stayed after that a whole month or more, until the funeral of the deceased Queen, which was celebrated with great magnificence, as befitted so august a Sovereign.

One day five of us were released. The others had been confined for various causes, I was the only priest. My keeper invited me to dinner with the rest, entertained me honourably at his own table, spoke to me with affability; and, in some sort of compensation for the injury whereby he had detained me after the King's command, gave me eighty reals. He also got me a room within the walls of the prison, where my friends could meet and welcome me. When dinner was over, after my fifth year in the fortress, the seventeenth of my whole imprisonment, I went out in the midst of a great company, not however free, but under a triple guard as far as Calais.

Meanwhile a ship had been made ready and awaited us in the river Thames, which flows just under the walls of the Tower. A vast crowd gathered to the spectacle. So I was led out of custody. There were not wanting some Catholics in presence of that crowd to fall at my knees and ask my blessing. With many Catholics accompanying me, I was placed in a neighbouring house till the hour came for sailing. Coming in, I found the house packed with a great multitude of lookers-on. Many Catholics had come to salute and congratulate me after so many years of prison and solitude. Others sent me money by messengers. One thrust into my hands a casket, so full that it would scarcely shut. I think it must have contained pretty nearly his whole substance. I admired his profuse liberality, but suspecting the man's poverty refused the gift. I need say no more of the ready good will of these people. It needed almost violence to repel their offers. I only took so much as I thought would be necessary for the expenses of my journey. After two hours we said good-bye to our friends, and went aboard ship, they returning home.

We travelled to Dover, partly by water, partly by the more direct road overland. We had to pass through Canterbury, where, as we stayed at the inn, I received a visit from an acquaintance of mine, an inhabitant of that city. While we were talking privately together in the separate part of the room where we were, mine hostess, coming gradually from a distance, approached. Seizing at length her opportunity, she comes nearer, and "Pray, sir," she said, "have you a wife?" "Yes," I said, "and a large family." She suddenly became silent. I also held my peace for a little, and then I added: "Not as you suppose, since I am a priest and it is not lawful for us to touch woman; and as for the children I said I had, they are spiritual children, born of the seed of orthodox faith and sound doctrine," and a few other things to the same effect. She was much struck with my words and pleased and glad at heart; and, shaking my hand, she said: "Truly, I call you blessed men who do so; for as for our ministers," (knaves, I almost think she called them) "they are much given the other way; nothing will do for them but they must feed and dress their wives like so many ladies; their daughters too they bring up quite above their state, teaching them to think so much of themselves that they are not content with ordinary husbands, and blush not to seek to marry noblemen." So she said, a woman who, I dare say, had never seen a priest or spoken to a Catholic. I relate this fact and these words to show how beautiful and attractive, except to very corrupt minds, is the doctrine and practice of the Catholic faith, once it is made known, even to heretical ears; and how disposed that nation is to take up the faith, could it be freely preached. We set out from Canterbury and came the same day to Dover, and thence on the next day to Calais. All the way we, myself and two other priests, were accompanied by three guards, one pursuivant and two of the household servants of the King. Our guards, having done their duty, returned to England, and we started on our journey to St Omer's.

A little while before my release from the Tower of London a prisoner had been brought there, who had been in the service of the chamberlain of the late Queen. Immediately after the Queen's death he had had a conversation about King James, her successor, with a companion and acquaintance, who had drawn him into the conversation, saying what happy days they should now have, seeing that the King was a great zealot for the Gospel and a stern chastiser and persecutor of all Catholics. "Hold your tongue," he said to him; "you are not yet so sure of his mind and judgement about religion." These words the other reported to the Royal Council. They, without delay, sent at once officers to arrest him. In arresting him they opened a box, and found a book of Father Persons called the Directory, but corrupted by a heretic. They drag the man off at once to the Tower of London, and lodged him immediately under my room in a pestilential place. One day, in the presence of his keeper and mine, hearing me walking up and down above, he asked who it was that was walking. The keeper answered that it was a certain Jesuit. "I quite believe it," he said, "for were he not a good man he would never see this place. And I," he went on to say, "have never yet seen a priest. However, when I get out, the first thing I shall do will be to search one of them out, and have an interview with him." At the same time he asked the keeper to salute me in his name, and sent me a little present of wax candles.

THE MARTYRDOM OF THE VEN. JOHN BOSTE

By the Venerable Christopher Robinson

[Probably August], 1594

[From a 17th century transcript at Everingham, Knaresborough MSS., large folio, ff 500-509. The first and last paragraphs are, it is plain, added by the transcriber.]

The death of Mr Boost written by Mr Robinson priest, who shortly afterwards dyed in the same glorious manner at Carlile. This letter was directed to Mr Dudley, Priest.

Reverend Father (and be it taken as it is spoken without flattery) my best beloved. I being desirous to see the valiant combat of the Blessed Martyr Mr Boost, ventured, because I was unknown, to ride of late into Durham, where I did not onely hear at the bar, but see at the Trees, their cruel proceeding against that happy martyr.

Whereof because you may be ignorant, being so far of, I thought it my duty (hearing of this bearer) to salute you with these few lines, wherein I will make no other relation of their speeches and cut-throat cruelty practised against that man of God, than I have heard and saw. My duty, I say, especially being stirred up hereunto by those our friends, to whom in duty this I may not deny.

On Tuesday the 23rd of July I took my journey out of Westmoorland, thinkeing that I should on the morrow after see at Durham that martyr dye. And it happened that I could not win to Durham on Tuesday, but on Wednesday in the morning by eight of the clock I came thither. And I was no sooner come but presently I thought it my best to aske for the President, makeing as if I had to crave justice, as touching the slaughter of Steven Kirbridge, whereunto they answered that the President and Judges were set down and that they were about to receive the verdict of the jurie as concerning two seminaries and other prisoners arrainged, which when I did hear I made the haste I could, till I came where I might both hear & see their proceedings against them. And when I came to the bar the jurie was indeed giving in their verdict as they had told me before, for they were reading the names of the prisoners whereof four were found by the jurie guilty for felons, and three for treason (as they spoke) but indeed for religion, which being don, & the jurie dismissed Judge Beamond stood up, & made this or such a like speech as followeth:

"I have not," said he, "to speak to you all in general, because ye be committed for diverse matters, some for treasons, and some for felon[ies]. But in particular, and first for you that be convicted for treason, you have behaved yourselves as undutifull and naughtie subjects, who have gon about by all means possible to withdraw from her Majesty's subjects their good affection, obedience and loyalty which faithfull and loyal subjects ought in conscience to give to their soveragne. And how do they steal into their bosoms, & withdraw their minds? They come into this realm with the Pope's Bulls forsooth & tell the people they are not bound any more to be subject to her highness. And why? Because Pius or Sixtus Quintus hath excommunicated our Queen long ago and deprived her, as you say, of all power of regiment whatsoever; nay, & hath commanded, say you, all her subjects to give no more obedience unto her under pain of excommunication. This is that yee preach in corners. This is your doctrine when yee come to men's houses, & this yee teach the people not onely in all places, where yee come in England, but in Ireland, in Spain, in Italy, and to be short through all Christendom. For in Ireland Dr Sanders stirred up her people, by the means of the said excommunication unto a rebellion. In Spain there is one Parsons who stirreth up the king to make war against her Highness & carrieth away that good mind, which otherwise he would bear unto her. And in Italy Cardinal Allen incenseth the Pope daily to address his forces and to exhaust the Church['s] treasures for the subversion of our country, pulling her out of her throne to the utter ruin of us all. All these, said he, are Englishmen and therefore more to be hated, & their treasons more to be punished, behaveing themselves like filthy birds, sayd he, who defile their own nest. What said I? Defile their own nest? Nay, who are cruell towards their own mother, seeking the destruction of their native country & therefore (turning himself towards the people) I would not have you to think, said he, that these men are to suffer for religion, but for treason, not for counterfeit piety, but for professed iniquitie against God, against their prince, against their friends and kinsfolks: yea against their own soyl and native country. But said he (turning himself to the blessed martyrs) yee will perchance alledge for these your proceedings the Bishop of Rome's authoritie. I will not dispute with you in divinity (I noted his words) for I know yee are learned. I leave unto those that are divines to dispute with you as touching his authoritie. It is for me to urge the laws and statutes of this realm against you. Nevertheless I have read that Lucius, king of England, being desirous to keep his subjects in some good order sent unto the Bishop of Rome to desire him if he would be pleased to send into this realm some good and godly laws as he might thereby govern his people in some better order than he had don in former times. The Bishop of Rome, who would not—sayd he—take unto him, being a very good man, nor usurpe the name of Pope, writ back unto Lucius, who was then king of this realme (his epistle is yet extant) that he had within his own realme Bishops, men of sufficient learning to deal herein, & that he might know of them what was to be don in this matter. And besides, sayd he, in his epistle to the king 'Habes utramque paginam, ex his sumito tibi legem—Thou hast both the Old & new Testament, choose out of them to thyself a law.' By which epistle it is manifest (quoth Beamond the judge) that the Bishop of Rome gave then that authoritie to the Bishops of England which now yee give to the Pope, and that he would not challenge unto himselfe any authoritie within the diocess of other bishops. Yet notwithstanding all this, I will not, as I sayd, dispute with you upon this argument, for yee be learned. But I have to lay before you your treasons in stirring up her subjects against our Soveraigne, whom I beseech God long to preserve."

The people sayd, "Amen."

Then sayd the judge. "For these your unnatural proceedings against your prince, & horrible treasons against your country, I am now to proceed in judgement against you, which is this. You shall be carryed to the place from whence yee came; & from thence y^e^ shall be carryed either upon a sled, or upon a hurdle unto the place of execution, there yee shall be hanged by the necks, presently yee shall be cut down, & your members shall be cut from you, & cast into the fire even in your own sight (I noted his words even in your own sight), your bowels shall be pulled out of your bodys, & cast likewise into the fire, your heads shall be cut of, your bodys shall be quartered & the parts of your bodys shall be disposed as officers shall see occasion."

This cruel judgement was no sooner pronounced but Mr

Boost, that blessed martyr, sung with a joyfull heart & cheerfull countenance the first verse of the hymn which the Church of God singeth in times of great and exceeding joy. "Te Deum laudamus, te Dominum confitemur—We praise thee O God, we confess thee our Lord." And Mr Engram answered "Te æternum Patrem omnis terra veneratur.—Thee, everlasting Father, all the earth doth worship." Whereunto Mr Boost did reply. "Qui odit animam suam in hoc mundo in vitam æternam custodit eam.—Who hateth his soul in this world conserveth it unto life everlasting."

Besides these two martyrs there was a layman condemned under the aforesayd judgement, which some time had been a minister; his name was Swallwell. This man laying aside his ministry became a Catholick, and persuaded diverse, as it is reported, to become Catholicks, whereof one caused him to be apprehended, examined and put in prison, and now at the Assize gave witness against him, and took his oath that he persuaded him to become Catholick; for which persuasion, because it was taken to be no less trespass than treason, he received the same judgement with the aforesayd martyrs. This layman fearing that he should dye, if he did not yield to their proceedings, desired the President and the residue to pardon him for what he had don, and he told them he would go to the Church, acknowledge the queen to be supream in spiritual matters, and (to be short) to do as they would have him to do. This he did before the jurie had given in their end, and before he had received his final judgement with the rest. But now, sir, Mr Boost and Mr Engram seeing the other man to fail, and that he had received his final judgement, which would not be revoked, they spoke unto him and sayd: "Alass, dear brother, in what case are you? As you tender your own weal, pity your silly soul. You are to dye, for judgement will not be revoked. Profess that faith with your mouth, which we know you believe in your hart. Remember 'Corde creditur ad justitiam, ore autem confessio fit ad salutem:—In hart it is believed unto justice, and by the mouth confession is made unto health,' that is to say, unto salvation."

Which words and such like did so work in that good man's heart, that not long after in the presence of the President, of the Judges and the whole consistorie this same man cryed out "I am resolved, I am resolved." The Judge hearing him crye out, rose up and sayd, "Wherein art thou resolved?" "In matters of faith," sayd he. "And by whom?" sayd the judge. "Even by these two," (pointing to Mr Boost and Mr Engram) sayd he, "martyrs before God," & repeating his words, "martyrs before God," sayd he. "For tho' yee make as if they dyed for treason, yet in very truth they dye for religion, and if it were a thousand deaths, I am very well content," sayd he, "with them to suffer."

The President being somewhat moved hereat rose up, and talked with the Judges, and the Judges with the President, and every one with his next fellow. Insomuch that you would have laughed to hear the muttering of our enemies at the poor condemned prisoners. Mr Boost, Mr Engram and Swallwell were commanded presently to be carryed away, and truly they went away rejoyceing, that they were to receive such a severe judgement for God's cause, as might be very well gathered by their cheerfull countenances, which did joy my heart not a little, in seeing them take such joy in bearing up their irons.

Now to leave them in prison close at their prayers, till four of the clock. At four of the clock Robson the under-sheriffe came back from setting the President and the Judges from Durham towards Newcastle, and incontinent he fetched the prisoners forth, and layd Mr Boost in a cart and a little new pulled line* being layd under him, he layd along upon his back, holding his hands up towards the heavens, and so he was carryed towards the Trees, speaking nothing, but haveing his mind occupyed in meditation; except onely y^t^ he gave his blessing to two or three women, w^ch^ fell down upon their knees in the street, as I heard, whom the sheriffe commanded to be apprehended. I heard this I say, for I left my guide to marke the things which happened in the way between the prison and the Trees, and I went myself to provide place at the Trees, before the sheriffe came, where I might both hear and see whatsoever did happen.

Now when the martyr was brought unto the Trees, he raised up his body, for he had all this time layd upon his back, took of his night-cap and gave them thanks for their pains they had taken in bringing him unto that place. A minister standing by, seeing him to take all things in good part, and to behave himselfe so patiently, accused him (being sore I think that he had behaved himself so orderly) of ill-behaviour, which a gentleman (whom I take to be Edward Musgrave of Allstone Moor) hearing, sayd unto the minister "My friend, say not so, for Mr Boost hath behaved himselfe very well," and repeating his words, he said "Mr Boost hath behaved himselfe marvelous well." Then they bid him come forth of the cart, which he did, and haveing stood a little while upon his feet, they bid him step up the ladder. He paused a little, made the sign of the cross and said "Angelus Domini nunciavit Mariæ, et concepit de Spiritu Sancto" with an "Ave" etc. At the next step he paused and sayd "Ecce Ancilla Domini, fiat mihi secundum verbum tuum," with an "Ave." And at the third step he sayd, "Et verbum caro factum est, et habitavit in nobis," with an "Ave Maria."

Now by this being come allmost to the top of the ladder, he turned himselfe towards the people, made the sign of the cross, and offered to make a speech to the people. But he was no sooner begun to speak, but the sheriff stayed him and commanded the hangman to do his office, and to put the rope about his neck, which being don the hangman would have turned the ladder, but the sheriff stayed him and bid the martyr that now he should speak. But the martyr, offering again to make the aforesayd speech, because the people did expect somewhat of him, was stayed again and bidden make him fit for God and say his prayers. Then the blessed martyr said "I hope in God that if you will not suffer me to speak unto you in this world, that this my death will speake in your harts, that which I would have spoken." At last sayd he, "Seeing you will not suffer me to speak unto you, suffer me to speak unto my soul and to repeat the psalmes of the prophet David." "You may," sayd the sheriff. Then sayd the martyr, holding up his hands towards the heavens, fixing his hart upon God, and lifting up his eyes to heavenwards, "Convertere anima mea in requiem tuam quia Dominus bene fecit tibi. 'Return, O my soul, into thy rest, because God hath don well unto thee.' And why hath God don well unto thee? It followith, Quia eripuit animam meam a morte, oculos meos a lacrymis, pedes meos a lapsu. 'Because he hath delivered my soul from death.' From death. What's that? From the sting of heresie, wherewith our country Alass! is infected, plagued and pestered." "So" sayd the sheriff, "keep your peace, and speak no more." "Alass" sayd he, "this is but the psalme of the prophet, and therefore cannot be hurtfull." "Yea," sayd the sheriffe, "but you make a commentary upon it. Say it in Latin as oft as you will." Then the martyr, seeing it was not lawfull to speak English, repeated the words of the Prophet in Latin, untill he came to the end of the psalme. Which when he had don, there was a fellow which bad him be sorry for his sins. "As for my sins," says the martyr, "friend, I thinke I am not at your correction; and indeed I suppose that both you and I had need to be sorry for our sins." Then sayd the sheriffe, "No more, you are at his correction." "Well," sayd one, "let him be sorry for his offences towards his prince." "I," sayd the martyr, "I never offended her." And when they urged he had offended her, he sayd, "I take it upon my death, I went never about to hurt her. Yea, I wish to God," sayd the martyr, "that my blood may be in satisfaction for her sins." "Dispatch, dispatch," sayd the sheriff to the hangman. Then the hangman turned the ladder, and the martyr went down saying, "In manus tuas Domine commendo spiritum meum." The hangman, haveing a knife in readiness to cut the rope, offered presently to cut it, as soon as the ladder was turned, but the sheriffe stayed him. He haveing hung the space of a Pater noster the sheriffe commanded the rope to be cut. Then one takeing him by the feet, two or three keeping his body as it did fall, ran with it till they came at the fire, which was made a good space from the Trees. But by that they had carryed him to the fire, he was well near revived, comed unto himselfe, and spoke. (Oh cruell butchers, to cut him down so soon), and prayed that God would forgive his bloody butcher, when he was riping his belly, saying, "God forgive yee for it," even as Saint Stephen prayed for his persecutors saying "Ne statuas illis hoc peccatum. 'Lay not this sin, O God, to their charge.'" To be short, for I see that I blot the paper with tears, they cut of his members and hurled them into the fire even in his own sight according as judgement was given, and pulled out his bowells in most butcherly manner, cut of his head, and mangled his sacred body in the quartering most pitifully. Neither was all this sufficient to satisfye their cruelty, unless they boyld the quarters of his body.

This is that cruell tragedy which I both heard and saw. Now to come to that which I have by hearsay. They say that Mr Boost would not be tryed by the country but by God and the Bench, saying that there should be no ignorant man guilty of his blood, but onely the Bench which sought his blood. I heard that Mr Engram spoke much at his arraingement in Latin, and did offer disputation. That they answered him in English, for they account Latin but Romish. I heard that the President accused Mr Boost for marrying a gentleman who wished upon the day of the marriage the death of the Prince. "Yet," sayd the President to Mr Boost, "you answered that you for your part had to deal [in] matters which belonged to your office and calling, and not in matters against your soveragne." I heard that Mr Boost took his heart in his hand, he was so lively when they took it out of his body, and that he lifted up his ha[nds] towards his head when that bloody butcher was cutting it of. This [is] that I have by hearsay. But at Durham I durst not be inquisitive.

W[hen] Mr Boost stood at the bar, and had received that their judgement, there came a minister to that blessed martyr and sayd, "Thou art not worthy to tread upon the earth." Whereunto Mr Boost sayd nothing again, but puting of his cap, he softly whispered. Edward Musgrave, hearing the minister revile the blessed martyr in this order, came unto the minister and took him a sound knock upon the breast, saying, "Is it not sufficient to condemn him, but thus to revile him allso?"

I will cease to trouble you: you may learn more of others. I thinke I shall never see such resort of people as was at Mr Boost's death, but especially of gentlemen and gentlewomen. There was so many that one Banister, the President's man, sayd, confirming it with an oath, "I think," sayd he, "that the devill is amongst the people here in Bishoprick, which flock togeather thus to see a traytor dye. I wish to God," sayd he, "that all the rest of them were hanged up like dogs with him." And a minister seeing country gentlewomen at the execution, whereof there were not few, which grieved him not a little, sayd to them, "Gentlewomen, what should move you to come hither?" Whereof one replyed that they came to hear Mr Boost speak. Then said he, "Why should we suffer him to speak, seeing that he will not so much as hear us speak?"

Well, I am too tedious; you shall have the rest when we meet, which I wish should be shortly, for diverse be desirous to see you. Mr Engram suffered of late at Gateside Head, near to New Castle: & Swallwell at Darlington. Your friends be in health. News here is none, but that Car remaineth at Newcastle, condemned. Commend me, I pray you, to the rest of our friends.

Deo Gratias. Yours, C. A.

Notandum. That these words ensuing are annexed to the original copy in an old and distinct charectir. "The death of Mr Boost written by Mr Robinson, who suffered at Carlile shortly after."

A dedicatory epistle to the truly vertuous genntlewoman Mrs Francis Thirwall of Newbigen in Northumberland, was prefixed to this copy by Paul Layton. The onely material fact in it, is that Mr Boost was this lady's uncle.

THREE STATE LETTERS CONCERNING CATHOLICS DURING THE REIGN OF KING CHARLES I, 1626

[THESE letters are communicated by Miss Harting from the originals, which have passed from her father, the late James Vincent Harting, Esq., to her possession.

(A) The first is a corrected draft, of which a fair copy may be found in the Record Office, Domestic Charles I, vol. 21, n. 63. The calendarer says of that document that it was "probably prepared by Sir Thomas Wilson." The plan, of which mention is made towards the end of the paper, is actually annexed to the Record Office copy, of which I have supplied a tracing, with notes, after collating.—J. H. P.]

A true Relation of that which passed betwixt the King's Officers, And the ffrench Embassaders ffollowers by Occasion of Apprehending Englishe Subjects Papists, y^t^ resorted daily to Masse to the Embassa^dr^ lying in Durham House.

There being daily Resort of Multitudes of Englishe Subjects of more then a hundred at once to Masse at the French Embassad^rs^ in Durham House, not only when the Embassad^r^ himselfe was there, but also when he was retyred into Greenwich, leaving some servants at Durham house; & that in this time of the Parliam^t^ sitting. The Lords of the Councell, by His Ma^ties^ direction, who tooke notice of the Said abuse, wrote their Letters to the Bp. of Durham and to all & every other the Justices of ye peace within the County of Mid^x^, or the City or Liberties of Westminster, the Ten^r^ of w^ch^ letters was this—

After our very hearty Comendations to yo^r^ Lop^s^, His Ma^ty^ hath been Informed that there is a great Liberty taken by diverse of his Subjects, which resort to the hearing of Masse at Durham House, which as it is very scandalous to the Church & of ill Example to be suffered at any time, soe is it much more now in this time of Parliam^t^ and therefore wee cannot but take notice of it, and doe hereby pray & require yo^r^ Lop^s^ to take this into yo^r^ care. And although wee would not that any disturbance or trouble be made within the House of the Embassad^r^, yet such of his Ma^ties^ Subjects as resort hither & shall be present at the Masse, wee wish you to apprehend, & to comitt them to prisson, untill by due course of Justice they shall be delivered, And to give us notice of yo^r^ Proceedings herein, & soe wee bid yo^r^ Lop^s^ very heartily farewell —ffrom

Vpon the receipt of which Letters, ye Bp of Durham with an other Justice of peace, made a Warrant in this forme:

*Vid*t. Midd cum Civt et Libert Westmr.

To all Constables and all others his Majesties Officers, to whom these may appertaine—Whereas the Lords and others of his Majesties privy Councell have signified by their Letters that his Maty is informed of the great Liberty taken by many of his Subjects in resorting to hear Masse at the ffrench Ambassadrs at Durham House, and thereupon Commanded that all such as shall resort thither and be present at Masse bee apprehended & Comitted to prison. These are in his Maties Name to will & command you to have a diligent care in observeing & taking knowledge of all such of his Maties Subjects as shall resort to the said Masse & bring them before us whose names are hereunto Subscribed, or before some others of his Maties Justices of ye peace for the County, Citty or Liberty, That such Course may be taken with them as by his Maties Laws is required, Provided that you make noe disturbance or trouble in the Embassadrs house, but to let them be apprehended when they are thence departed, either by Water or by Land. And hereof faile not, as you will Answr the Contrary at yor Perrills, if you or any of you be found Negligent herein, ffrom Durham house, 26th ffeb. 1625.

Subscribed by R. Dunelm. Tho. Wilson.

Vpon the receipt of wch Warrant for better Execution thereof, without Just offence to the ffrench Embassadr, direction was given to the Pursuivants, Constables, and others attending that Service, that they should attend only without the Walls & Water Staires of Durham House on the Water Side, & without the Bp. of Durham's Gate, without his outer Court, upon the Ground belonging to Brittan's Burse, in ye possession of my Lord of Salisbury, towards the street. Yea, soe carefull were the Makers of the said Warrant to give noe offence to the ffrench Ambassadr, that they gave a Straight comdmt to all ye Officers attending that Service, that noe man should offer to come within the Gate of the Bp. of Durham's great Court, nor any whom they should Apprehend as coming out from the Masse, be carryed to Sr Thomas Wilson's house to be examined, but to some other Justice of ye Peace dwelling without the great Gate of Brittan's Burse. The Officers did accordingly, yet not knowing that the Ambassadr himselfe was come the night before or early that morning to Durham House, who (it may be conceived) came in a private Mannr to make a quarrell, of that which might be done on that day being Sunday the 26th ffeb., he having heard that on fryday before two English men suspected to have said Masse in Durham house Chappell that day, were apprehended in an ale house, under the Burse, in one of the Earle of Salisbury's Tenements, & thence were comitted to Prison.

On ye said Sunday Morning 26th ffeb. the Pursuivants, Constables and other offirs attended without the Gate of ye Bp. of Durham's great and outer Court, betwixt that Gate & the Burse great Gate to the high street, at the time that they thought the English popish Subjects would come out from Masse.

The ffollowers of the ffrench Ambassad^{r} tooke upon them with their swords in their hands to carry the English Papists by strong hand through the Watch, and when the Officers offered to lay hold on the s^{d} English Papists only, the ffrench Embassad^{rs} ffollowers smote at ye Officers, giveing a blow on the fface to one Griffin, a Pursivant, the marke whereof is yet there to be seen, & hitting another in the Leg, whereof the partie yet halteth and greatly complaineth, yet not being throughly satisfied, they laid hold of ye said Griffin with violence to have drawn him into the house, saying they would carry him before the Embassad^{r},* whom ye Cunstables and Watchmen rescuing from them, they tooke from him his Cloake & his Hatt which were afterwards redelivered, And further the ffollowers of the Embassad^{r} were soe forward then to have quarrelled & done mischeif—that one of them thrusting with a Rapier at the officers had slaine one S^{r} John Bath, an Irishman (thought to have come out of ye house from Masse), if by ye sudden clapping to ye Wicket of ye Gate, the thrust had not been diverted. Vntill ye s^{d} violence offered to the said Pursivant Griffin, none of the Officers did offer to come within the Gate of the Bp. of Durham's outer great Court, but ye Inhabitants of ye street takeing notice of this Violence done to ye officers, came in heaps to Durham House Gate with Bills & Clubs to vindicate the same, But ye Bp. of Durham comeing home at y^{t} Instant from the Court, stayed and pacified them, caused them to retire to without ye Gate of ye outer Court, & likewise caused all the Embassad^{rs} ffollowers to betake themselves into the house, And takeing with him S^{r} Thomas Wilson, the Pursuivant, & ye other man who was smitten & hurt, wente to speake with the Embassad^{r}, to whom the said Bp. by S^{r} Thomas Wilson his Interpreter, said to this Effect: "S^{r} I here finde a great disorder, & that yo^{r} ffollowers have adventured to draw upon them a great dang^{r}, If any man have offered Violence or Injury to yo^{r} Selfe or any of yo^{rs}, his Ma^{y} and the Councell of State have their Ears open to yo^{r} complaints, and are ready to give satisfaction." To which he gave this Answer, "That he wished his ffollowers had killed the Officers, and y^{t} he was sorry they had not killed some of them, & that ye King his Ma^{ty} should require reason of ye King of England for y^{t} w^{ch} was done against the Law of Nations, And that he Expected noe Subject of England should be troubled for comeing to Masse in his house." And so in a kind of Scorn turned himselfe, & went away from the Bp. of Durham, & S^{r} Thomas Wilson, & his Servants in the presence of ye s^{d} Bp. and S^{r} Thomas, did kicke, spurne & evill intreat the Pursuivant & the Man hurt in the Leg, notwithstanding all of which y^{e} Officers were Instantly all discharged, & ye parties y^{t} day laid hold on were released.

It is requisite to be understood that his Ma^{ty} haveing Lodged

* Note. It is said ye Embassad^{r} stood all this while in a window looking into ye Outer Court, & saw all y^{t} passed, without checking or seeming to take any notice of this disorder among his servants.

the Ambassad^{r} at his House of Hampton Court, & being desireous to accomodate him with some convenient Lodging near Whitehall, at his removeing from Hampton Court thither, he required the Bp. of Durhame to afford him some lodgeings in his House, which had stood free from Infection all ye sicknesse time, w^{ch} ye s^{d} Bp. performed, crouding up himselfe and his whole ffamily (being great) into the worst and basest Roomes of ye House, leaving all ye good & large Roomes thereof, wth others to ye number of 30, one wth another, to ye Embassad^{rs} use, yet reserveing to himselfe & his family passage through ye hall, & through all the Gates and Doors leading either to ye Water or high Street—And neither the Ambassad^{r} or any ffollower or Servant of hys, will or can say, y^{t} ye Bp. of Durham or any of his have been other y^{n} very kinde, respective, & servisable to ye Emb^{r} & all his Servants in all Occasions dureing the time of their being in his House.

The Scituation of Durham House, ye distinction of ye Courts, passages, Gate & wayes thereof, & thereto adjoyning, will be easily discerned by a rough draught and plott of ye same herewth sent.

[This paragraph erased.]

It is also to be noted that upon the Ambassad^{rs} Compl^{t} by his Servants to the Lord President of Wrong done unto him herein, by the afforesaid Officers, The Lord President of the Councell, willing to satisfie him, gave Orders that ye Officers should attend upon a day pre-fixed to Answer such things as should be objected against them, withall wishing and desireing that some on the Emb^{rs} behalfe might be there also present, & ready to chardge them. The Officers accordingly attended a whole afternoon at ye time appoynted & desired by ye Embassd^{rs} Servants, but at the time appoynted nor never since, any from the Embassad^{rs} came ab^{t} it.

If it be Informed that a ffrenchman that day was by the Officers Attacked and threatned to be Imprisoned, It is true, but confessed by himselfe, that he was not of the Emb^{rs} ffamily, but an English Subject, that had lived 10 or 12 years here in England, and a married man, And this Man to avoid offence to the Ambassad^{r} was released instantly, & never imprisoned or deteined soe much as halfe a quarter of an hour, And moreover the Officers were soe willing to humor the Embassad^{r}, that wittingly they suffered the Emb^{rs} Servants to let English Men Papists out at ye Water Gate by 6, 8, 10, [or] 12 Boatfuls at once, without apprehending them.

[The following passage at the end has been erased, and does not appear in the Record Office copy, and is here printed for what it is worth, rather than any suppression should appear. The witnesses, on the face of it, do not deserve full credit.

And further it is affirmed y^{t} the officers have been in other occasions so Indulgent to all the Amb^{rs} followers, that sundry times they haveing found some of them in Leud manner with divers base filthy women, they never molested them for the same, but let them go away in quiet. And y^{t} the Amb^{rs} Harbinger having to doe wth a leud cunning Queane y^{t} had cossened him of many Crowns, the Officers assisted him to finde her out, and made her restore the most of this money againe.—J. RIGHT HONORABLE,—Yesterday I acquainted the Duke of Buckingham with that wch. was descouerred by the mezengers I imploied for the apprehending a priest at Newington, where a house was taken by the Jesuits, and kept by 2 women, who had 3 or 4 yong children who were thought to bee of good sort, & brought up by these women under the goverment of the priests. There was a fair Massing furnture found in the house, & all things thereto belonginge. A priest was in the house when the messengers entered, but escaped their hands. One of the women was apprehended, & committed by a justice of peace. Whereupon one Heath was sent unto mee, from Mon^r D. Escute, the Queen's late Threasurer, w^th a letter, as hee said, on behalf of that woman. For stead whereof hee delivered mee a letter under the hands of the said Escute & two or three others written to the Queen in the behalf of the said Heath, testifying that he was a sound catholique, & had done them faithful service, & therefore intreated her M^ty to entertain him into her service. This my Lord Duke thought fitt to bee told his M^ty that the entertainment of such a fellow may be prevented, w^ch I make bold to recomend to your Honor.

Furthermore I must intreat you on the behalf of the Comissioners for his M^tys estate, to acquaint his M^ty with the offer made by Mr Tipper and Mr Gason for the draining of Marshes uppon the conditions hereinclosed, & uppon which wee al think it fitt that a grant may pass unto them according to their petition. You may therefor be pleased to move his Ma^ty in the name of his Commissioners that order may be given to Mr Attornney to draw up there Patent. Lastly I have moved his Ma^ty for a grant to the East India Company to build powder-mills in Kent & Sussex, instead of that w^ch his Ma^ty will have discontinued in Winsor forest, & by his Ma^ty's commandment I have given order to Mr Attornney to make ready the booke for his Signature about w^ch Mr Attornney himself hath also received his Ma^tys directions. (p. 61) 1628. HISTORICAL NOTES

THE beginning of the English College at Rome was in the year 1578. Mr Charles Paget, Mr Thos Morgan, Mr Throgmorton began their opposition against F. Parsons and Sir Francis Inglefield in Paris 1583, 1584.

The stirs in Wisbeach Castle began 1595.

The names of 18 secular priests who were said to write to F. Garnet to have F. Edmond Weston a Jesuit made superior over them in Wisbeach were these. 1. Ludovicus Barlous. 2. Thomas Branstonus. 3. Jacobus Powellus. 4. Leonardus Hidus. 5. Gulielmus Parius. 6. Joannes Boltonus. 7. Gulielmus Chadocus. 8. Joannes Grineus. 9. Robertus Nutterus. 10. Alexander Gerardus. 11. Phillippus Stranguiseus. 12. Robertus Woodruffus. 13. Thomas Haberlainus. 14. Rodolphus Bickleus. 15. Christophorus Drilandus. 16. Aegidius Archerus. 17. Edmundus Braddocus. 18. Christophorus Southwortus.

King James at his first entrance into England protested as followeth: 1. That he would have no blood spilt for religion. 2. That he would have no soul money for conscience, contrary to the word of God. 3. That he would review the laws made against Catholicks and give order for clearing them by reason in case they have been in times past further or more rigourously executed by the judges than the meaning of the law was.

In July 1603 before the King's coronation by special order from the King without any suite or motion of the Catholicks certain recusants of the best quality and ability out of divers parts of the realm were sent for to Hampton Court by the Lords of the Privy Council and were by them made assured that the King's pleasure was to exonerate the Catholics of England from henceforth of 20l. a month for recusancy and that they should so long enjoy this relaxation as they kept themselves upright in all Civil and true carriage towards the King and the state without contempt, expresly signifying that recusancy should be taken for no contempt; and this they were willed to signify to all other Catholicks.

(p. 62) Don Antonio by agreement with Queen Elizabeth upon his restoring to the crown of Portingall was to make all his Bishops of the English nation, thereby to encourage the English clergy in a party against Spain.

The first students that went to Rome College were these, Mr William Holt priest afterwards a Jesuit, Mr Ralph Standish a young gentleman his pupil, Mr John Askew deacon, Mr Thomas Bell that afterwards in England became an Apostata, priest, Mr John Gower that after fell distracted. Mr William Law and Mr John Mush two young men. Among these Mr Ascue Mr Bell and Mr Mush were the first that came to Rome.

Fª Parsons found in France or Spain an Englishman called Mr Robert Heighinson who had been in rebellion with the northern earls and was fled for that cause. This gentleman was very skilful in the Histories of England and had as is said compiled a Chronicle out of which and by daily conference Fª Parsons drew the pedigree of all the competitors to the crown of England.

Fª Parsons and Fª Campion coming into England changed the former course and by more public open and peremptory dealing sought to set forward Catholic religion and beat down heresy, whereupon F. Parsons assisted with divers priests and laymen which he drew to him, began to write divers books against the heretical ministers and got a print in England &c. This greatly exasperated the state and then they began to devise sharper laws than ever had been, and to shew more cruelty both against Priests and Catholicks; the proceeding of Fª Parsons and his companion being judged very indiscreet unseasonable and turbulent by D. Watson Bishop of Lincoln and other wise and learned men of the old clergy alive yet in prison.

Before Fª Parsons going out of England Fª Haywood was come in. Fª Parsons went to Paris, thence to Rome in great speed, returned to Paris where he stayed for the most part out of their college some months and after went into Spain where he continued many years and wrought many feats against the English State. Mr Cecill and some other English Priests in Spain had procured some maintenance for English students by favour of a Spanish Bishop, into this work Fª Parsons intruded himself and joined with them and in short time he got the managing of the whole into his own hands, and shortly after he sent those others away and thus began the first English Seminary in Spain after which two or three more were erected, but they were maintained by the Spaniards alms. A little after Fª Parsons came out of England Fª Holt went in. He lived awhile in the north parts and from thence passed into Scotland, whither were sent three old Jesuits of good reckoning, Fª Cryton, Fª Hay and Fª Gordon. These three Jesuits took another course for converting Scotland than the secular clergy of England had done for England, using more profane and corrupt policy. They gave the Catholicks leave to go to church with heretics and to communicate with them in their heretical service and sermons, teaching that there was no sin but scandal. The drift was to save the Catholicks from the loss of their livings but this brought all Catholicks of Scotland to great dissolution. Fª

Holt and Fª Ogleby a Scottish Jesuit could never be brought to consent to this impiety, but they were either commanded silence or borne down by authority insomuch that few followed them.

Fª Haywood the Jesuit after Fª Parson's departure lived alone in England but was much honoured and loved by the secular priests. He was a good scholar but carried a haughty mind and a stirring head, not in state matters as Fª Parsons but other profane and ecclesiastical affairs. He rode much in coach accompanied with many and in costly apparel. His carriage seemed to be as of a legate a latere and he took upon him to assemble a great number of priests as it were in a provincial council; abrogated fasting on Fridays and our Lady's eves and other customs. This displeased much both priests and Catholicks and Doctor Allen and the College at Rheims yea and Fª Parsons, who procured Fª Haywood to be recalled out of England but before he could be ready he was apprehended and cast into the Tower.

Whilst Fª Haywood was prisoner in the Tower there was another Jesuit called Fª Bosgrave in durance there who had lived long in Poland or thereabouts. This man being apprehended yielded to go to Church thinking it to be as in Germany no distinctive sign. Afterward he recalled it again, and was sent back into Germany.

(p. 64) After Fª Campion's death came into England Fª Thomas Langdale a Jesuit having been in the Society 26 years. He fell and became an Apostata, and afterward returned into Germany as is said, married some heretical woman and died in his Apostacy.

When the King of Spain prepared to invade England Fª Parsons went from Spain to Rome and Doctor Allen from Rheims was also called thither at the King of Spain's suite the Doctor was created Cardinal and Dr Lewis Bp of Cassano.

Fª Holt after he had been in Scotland two or three years was taken and banished and then he went to Rome where he was made Rector of the English College after Fª Alphonso in which office Fª Holt gave much content to the scholars carrying himself very indifferently and hindered the enticing of them into the Society.

After Fª Haywood was sent away by the favour of the Earl Dudley, Fª Edmond Weston came in.

The names of the six first assistants to the Archpriest were these: 1. Dr John Baven. 2. Dr Henry Henshaw. 3. Mr Nicholas Tirwitt. 4. Mr Henry Shaw. 5. Mr George Birkett. 6. Mr James Standish.

The names of those priests that [were falsely said to have interlined] subscribed to Mr Preston's book of appeal in the Clinke were these: 1. Rob Charnock. S. theol. Baccalaureus. 2. Rodulphus Stanford. 3. Richardus White. 4. Christoph Thulis. 5. Joannes Barker. 6. Joannes White. 7. Thomas Leke. 8. Edmundus Canon. 9. Joannes Tomson. 10. Joannes Brian. 11. Joannes Farmer. 12. Gulielmus Davis.

The first beginners of the College of Lisbon in the year 1628 were Joseph Haines president, Dr Henry Mayland and Mark Harrington readers of Divinity with ten scholars.

(p. 27) 1628. PART OF MR SOUTHCOT'S WILL. 23 JUNII 1615

"Item. Where I had a mortgage of certain lands in Weston in the county of Buckingham which were Mr Thomas Throgmorton's conveyed unto Sir William Petre Knt., now Lord Petre, and Sir John Curson Knt., my nephew, in trust and confidence to my use as aforesaid; I do hereby declare my full will, mind and intent and do by these present signify that the said land, now forfeited for non payment of £1500 in November last, shall be and remain in them to the only use of my youngest son John Southcot, and if the land be sold by them any time hereafter then my mind and will is that my said son shall have all the money whatsoever the land shall be sold for, for a portion and estate of living for him to be disposed of and employed by himself for his present and future maintenance, and until the land shall be sold he to have the rent now paid for the said land and meadows assured which is £110 yearly. and this I signify to be my mind for the said land or money if the land be sold, Sir Francis Fortescue Knt. having promised to buy the land and to pay the money agreed upon for the same the 20 day of November next.

"And for future testimony of my love &c. ut infra. In consideration whereof I charge him to give unto my son John within one year after my decease the sum of £50 in current money if he then be living, for that I intended to have given him a bason and ewer of silver parcel-gilt now remaning at Mestham and divers other parcels of plate near to that value and I require him to be kind and loving to his said brother John, which I doubt not but he will deserve and requite in all good offices towards him and his."

VII. A GENEALOGICAL NOTE-BOOK OF THE VENERABLE ARTHUR BELL, O.S.F., MARTYR, 1638.

FROM the original manuscript, in my collection at Oxford. It consists of 28 folios, vellum, each 4 × 2½ inches. On folios 2, 5, & 7 are blazons of arms; folios 24-29 are blank. The MS., which is written with hardly any paragraphs, commences in a court hand, which changes, folio 17 into a cursive, after the author has noted that he was writing "to-day, 5 December, 1638." The cover consists of a fragment of an old English deed, dated 11 June 1589.

Father Arthur, in religion Francis, Bell, or as he spelt it, Bel, had previously published the will of his father William. The Testament of William Bel, gentleman, left written with his owne Hand; with Annotations at the end, and sentences by his sonne Francis Bel. Douay, 1632 (a copy in the British Museum). The account given in that book of the Bel family is curious and interesting, and should be studied in connection with the following document.—H. D. G.

Strickland, of Sizergh Castle, K.B., by whom he had an only s., Wm., vide May 12, and two daughters. He died aged 68, having been a staunch recusant for many years.

Mar. 4, (164-) Mr George Preston, junior,—lieut. col. in royal army, only s. of Geo. Preston, vide Apr. 5, by his 2nd. w.; slain at Bradford; unmar.

Mar. 5, (1648-16 . .) Mris. Eliz. Downes & Bridget Hudd: [leston].

Mrs. Downes was 3rd. d. of Jno. Preston, vide Mar. 27, & w. of Fris. Downes, vide Mar. 9. She o.s.p. in 1648.

Bridget Huddleston might either be the 3rd. d. of And. Huddleston, vide May 8, b. 1575, or Bridget, d. of Joseph Pennington, of Muncaster, Cumb., Esq., & w. of Wm. Huddleston, of Millom Castle. The latter in her widowhood was residing with relatives at Farington Hall in 1599-1601, when she was fined for recusancy.

Mar. 7, (. . . .) Mris. Waterton & Mris. Fran: Brath: [wayte].

Mrs Waterton was probably Anne, d. of Sir Hy. Slingsby, of Scriven, co. York, Knt., & w. of Thos. Waterton, vide July 3 & Oct. 30.

Mrs. Fres. Brathwayte, d. of Jas. Lawson, vide Feb. 16, was w. of Rich. Brathwayte, of Burnishead, Westm., Esq.

Mar. 9, (1648), Mr Fran. Downes,—bap. at Eccles, July 19, 1606, was eld. s. of Roger Downes, of Wardley Hall & Worsley Hall, co. Lanc., Esq., barrister of Gray's Inn & vice-chamberlain of Chester, by Anne, d. of Jno. Calvert or Calverley, of Cockerham Hall, Lanc., Esq., & his wife Jane, d. of Roger Dalton, of Pilling, Esq. Fris. Downes succeeded to his father's extensive estates, & m. Eliz. Preston, vide Mar. 5. His will, dated Feb. 20, 1642-3, contains an account of his creed, property, library, & family settlements. It was pr. at London Aug. 14, 1650, the estate passing to his bro. John's son Roger, b. 1648, the year of his father's death. Roger's sister & sole h., Penelope, became the w. of Rich. Savage, 4th Earl Rivers.

Mar. 25, (. . . .) Mris. Agnes Anderton.—2nd. d. of Jno Preston, vide Mar. 27, became the first w. of Xfer. Anderton, of Lostock Hall, Lanc., Esq., her marriage being commemorated in verse by the eminent poet and controversialist Fr. Laurence Anderton, S.J., "Silver-mouthed Anderton," alias "John Brereley, Priest."

Mar. 26, (1645-16 . .), Coll. John Sayer et Dorothy Skelton. Lieut. Col. Jno. Sayer, of Worsall, co. York, appears in Thos. Blount's "Catalogue of those Catholicks that died and suffered for theire Loyalty," as being slain at Naseby. The battle of Naseby was fought June 14, 1645, which is at variance with Dom Huddleston's anniversary. Col. Sayer m. Eliz., 3rd. d. of Geo. Preston, sen., vide Apr. 5. She m., 2ndly, Nathaniel West, of Borwick Hall, Lanc., grandson of Thos. West, 2nd. Lord de la Warr, and 3rdly, George Leyburne, of Cunswick Hall, Westm., & of Nateby Hall, Lanc., Esq.

Doro. Skelton, d. of Geo. Backhouse, of Morley, Westm., Esq., m. Jno. Skelton, vide Apr. 26.

Mar. 27, (1643), Mr. John Preston, senior,—of Preston Patrick, Westm., & of The Manor, Furness, Lanc., Esq.; will dated Sept. 4, 1642; portrait at Holker Hall, seat of Duke of Devonshire; m. Eliz., d. & coh. of Rich. Holland, Esq., of Denton, Lanc. He converted & enlarged the abbot's appartments at Furness Abbey for his residence, henceforth known as The Manor, & herein was the chapel at this period served by Fr. Huddleston. His son Sir Jno. Preston, born 1617, raised at his own expense a regiment in defence of his sovereign, was created bart., Apr. 1, 1644, was fatally wounded in an engagement at Furness, & died in 1645. It is singular that his chaplain fails to note his anniversary, though that of Lady Preston appears under June 15.

Mar. 31, (. . . .), Mr. Worsley, P[riest].—Possibly Dom Jno. Byfleet alias Worsley, O.S.B., who died at Stourton, Wilts., in 1652.

April 3, (. . . .), Mris. Eliz. Selby,—probably w. of Charles Selby, of Biddleston, Northumb., Esq., & d. of Jno. Gillibrand, of Gillibrand Hall, Chorley, Lanc., Esq., by Jane, d. of Roger Anderton, of Lostock Hall, Esq.

April 5, (1640), Mr. George Preston, senior,—of Holker Hall, co. Lanc., s. & h. of Jno. Preston, of Holker, Esq., m. 1°, Eliz., sister to Sir Ralph Ashton, of Great Lever, Lanc., Knt., and 2°, Margt., d. of Sir Thos. Strickland, of Sizergh Castle, Westm., Knt.; bur. at Cartmel Priory, to which stately church he was a great benefactor, though certainly in his later years he was a staunch recusant.

April 26, John Skelton,—of High House, Cumb., Esq., s. of Simon Skelton, of the same place, by his kinswoman Margt., d. of Geo. Skelton, a scion of the family of Armathwaite Castle, m. Doro., vide Mar. 26, & was father of Simon Skelton, vide Sep. 4. He was a royalist, and probably lost his life in the cause.

May 3, (1637), Sr John Gasc:[oigne],—of Lasingcroft, Parlington, & of Barnbow, created Bart. of Nova Scotia by Chas. I. in 1635, m. Anne Ingleby, vide June 2, & had issue—Sir Thos., his successor, who was tried for his life during the Oates Plot, retired to the Engl. Benedictine Abbey at Lambspring, & there died May 12, 1686, aged 90; Jno., Abbot of Lambspring; Fris., sec. priest, d. in Yorks. 1689; Michael, O.S.B., vide Oct. 4; Helen, w.

of Gilbert Stapleton, of Carlton; Mary, w. of Wm. Hoghton, of Park Hall; Cath., O.S.B., Abbess of Cambray, b. 1600 & d. May 21, 1676; Anne, w. of Geo. Twenge, of Kilton Castle; Margt., O.S.B., b. 1608, d. 16 Aug., 1637, at Cambray; & Christiana, d. in London on her way to become a Benedictine.

May 7, (. . . .); Unkle Andrew Hudd:[leston],—of Hutton John, Cumb., b. 1581 at Muncaster, 6th s. of And. Huddleston, vide May 8; resided for some time at Farington Hall; possibly the major slain at York in 1644. Jno. Huddleston alias Sandford, a sec. pr., was one of his younger sons.

May 8, (1601), Grandfa: Andr: Hudd:[leston],—of Farington Hall, Lanc., Esq., younger s. of Sir Jno. Huddleston, of Millom Castle, Cumb., Knt., by his third w. Joyce, d. of Sir Jno. Prickley, m. Mary Hutton, vide Sep. 2. Will dated May 4, pr. June 11, 1601.

May 12, (1649), Mr. Wm. Fleeming (Fleming),—of Rydal, only s. of Jno., vide Feb. 27; b. Feb. 1, 1628, d. in London of small-pox, unm., when the estates passed to his cos. Wm. Fleming, of Coningston, Esq., whose sister Doro. was the w. of Fr. Huddleston's eldest bro. Andrew.

May 13, (1649), Mr. Joseph Porter,—of Wery Hall, Cumb., m. Anne, d. of Lancelot Salkeld, vide July 9, & was father of Geo. Porter, vide June 30.

May 26, (. . . .) Mris. Eliz: Westby, junior,—only d. of Thos. Westby, Esq., of Mowbreck Hall and Burn Hall, Lanc., by his 2nd. w. Eliz., vide Aug. 12.

June 2, (. . . .) Lady Anne Gasc:[oigne],—d. of Jno. Ingleby, of Lawkland Hall, co. York, Esq. (by his 2nd w. Anne, d. of Wm. Clapham, of Beamsey, Esq.), & w. of Sir Jno. Gascoigne, vide May 3.

June 4, (. . . .), Mr. Wm. Lassels (Lascelles),—of Brackenborough, Yorks, eld. s. of Wm. Lascelles, Esq., of the same, by Eliz., d. of Fris. Tunstall, of Thurland Castle, Lanc., Esq., aet. 16 temp. Visit. Yorks 1612; m. Mary, d. & h. of Wm. Crofte (or Crofts), of Claughton Hall, Lanc., Esq., & his w. Mary, vide June 29. His w. m. 2ndly Jno. Leyburne, Esq., of Cunswick & Witherslack, Westm., whose son Thomas Leyburne (elder bro. of Bishop Jno. Leyburne), by his 1st. w. Cath., d. of Xfer. Carus, of Halton Hall, Esq., m. Wm. Lascelles' only d. & sole heiress Dorothy. Mrs. Jno. Leyburne's eldest son Geo. Leyburne, of Nateby Hall, Lanc., Esq., m. Eliz., d. of Geo. Preston, of Holker. Wm. Lascelles' brothers Thomas, John, Richard, & Ralph were all priests ordained at Douay.

June 7, (. . . .) Sister Mary Hudd:[leston],—b. Dec. 10, 1602, 2nd. d. of Joseph Huddleston, vide Nov. 9.

June 8, (. . . .) Capt. Ant. Aude et Rob:Temp:[est].

Anthony Orde, of the family of Orde and Longridge Hall, Northumb., a captain in the royal army, was slain in a sally from Newark.

Robt. Tempest, 6th s. of Sir Stephen Tempest, Knt., of Broughton Hall, Yorks, by his 2nd. w. Cath., d. of Hen. Lawson, of Neesham, co. Durham, Esq., was captain in a regiment of foot in the service of Chas. I., & was probably slain on the same occasion as Capt. Orde, 1644 or 1645. He m. Thomasine, relict of Nic. Michell, & d. of Stephen Tempest of Eshton.

June 15, (. . . .), Lady Jane Preston,—d. & sole h. of Thos. Morgan, of Heyford Hall, co. Northamp., & of Weston-sub-Weathley, co. Warwick, Esq., m. in 1637 Sir Jno. Preston, 1st. bart., vide under Mar. 27. Her son Sir John, 2nd. bart., was one of Fr. Huddleston's pupils at Moseley Hall, Staff., the seat of Thos. Whitgreave, Esq., when Chas. II. was concealed in the good Benedictine's room after the battle of Worcester, Sep. 3, 1651.

June 19, (. . . .), Hudd:[leston] Chiney.—Huddleston Cheney, Philippa, & Iona Cheney, sprs., were residing with Joseph Huddleston at Farington Hall, & were all fined for recusancy in 1612. There was evidently some relationship not shewn in the pedigree.

June 28, (1643), Coll: Tho: Howard, junior,—b. 1618, was eld. s. of Col. Sir Fris. Howard, of Corby Castle, Knt., by his 1st. w. Margt., d. of Jno. Preston, of The Manor, Esq. His commission as captain-lieutenant (lieut.-col.) in his father's regiment of hargobuçiers (dragoons) was signed by the Earl of Newcastle, Oct. 2, 1642. To his valour is chiefly attributed the royalist victory at Atherton Moor, in Yorkshire, which cost him his life at the early age of 25. Other authorities have given June 30 as the date of his death.

June 29, (. . . .) Mary Croft,—d. of Jno. Gascoigne, of Parlington, co. York, m. in 1602 Wm. Crofte, of Claughton Hall, in Lonsdale, Lanc., & their sole d. & h., Mary, m. 1° Wm. Lascelles, & 2° Jno. Leyburne, vide June 4.

Lambspring 1664, & d. on the mission in the North; & John.

July 3, (1641), Mr. Tho: Waterton,—of Walton Hall, b. 1583, eld. s. of Thos. Waterton, of Walton Hall, Yorks, Esq., by Mary, d. of Jno. Draycott, of Paynsley Hall, co. Stafford, Esq., succeeded his father, & m. 1° Anne Slingsby, vide Mar. 7, & 2° Bridget, d. of Mr. Horde, of Tankersley, & relict of Chas. Markham, of Ollerton, co. Notts, Esq. He had 3 sons and 6 drs. by his first wife, two of the drs. being the wives of Sir Thos. Smith, of Broxhall, bro. to Lord Carrington, and of Fris. Middleton.

July 9, (. . . .), Mr. Lancelot Salk:[eld],—of Whitehall, Cumb., whose grandfather and namesake m. Margt., d. of Rich. Huddleston, of Millom Castle, (by Margt., nat. d. of Rich. Nevill, Earl of Warwick), & sister and coh. to Rich. Huddleston, Esq., m. Eliz., d. & coh. of Nic. Bardsea, of Bardsea Hall, Lanc., Esq. For his dau. Anne vide May 13. Many priests came of this family.

July 15, (. . . .) Mris. Alice Clapt:[ton],—d. of Jno. Clopton (or Clapton), of Yorkshire, Esq., by Eliz., d. of Ralph Ashton, of Great Lever, Lanc., Esq. Her bro. Wm. Clopton, of Sledwick, co. Durham, Esq., m. his kinswoman Anne, d. & coh. of Wm. Clopton, of Clopton, co. Warwick, Esq., whose sister and coh., Joyce, m. Geo. Carew, Baron Carew of Clopton & Earl of Totnes. Her nephew Cuth. Clopton was ord. priest at Rome in 1634, & four of her nieces were nuns at Louvain, O.S.A.

July 17, (. . . .), Mris. Thomasin Thornb:[orough],—d. of Sir Robt. Bellingham, Knt., of Bellingham, Westm., by Anne, d. of Sir Jas. Pickering, Knt., m. Wm. Thornborough, of Hampsfield, in Cartmel, co. Lanc. Their son Wm. Thornborough, of Selside Hall & Whitwell Hall, co. Westm., Esq., m. Fr. Huddleston's niece, Mary, d. of Capt. Wm. Huddleston, of Hale Grange, Kirkby Thore, & had issue Wm. Thornborough, President of Douay College. Wm. Thornborough, the husband of Thomasin Bellingham, had an aunt Anne Thornborough m. to Thos. Preston.

July 26, (. . . .) Margaret Wilson,—probably Margt., d. of Wm. Wolston or Wilson, of Over Stavely, Westm., Esq., by Margt., d. of Rowland Thornborough, of Hampsfield, Lanc., Esq., & his w. Margt., d. of Sir Geoffrey Middleton, of Middleton Hall, Westm., major-general to Hen. VIII. in his expedition to Boulogne.

The Ingleby pedigree gives Nov. 28, 1648, as the date of Jno. Ingleby's death; he was buried at Clapham.

Aug. 26, (1661), Ed: Walker,—priest.

This entry and that of Jno. Lawrence, Aug. 19, appear at the end of the book, and are the only instances in which Fr. Huddleston has given the year. In another Missal of 1627, in the editor's library, these two obituary notices are repeated with the addition of "Sacerdos" after each name. The surnames are evidently aliases, and have not been identified.

Curwen, of Workington, Cumb., Knt., and her son Ant. Ducket, b. in 1636, sold Grayrigg and Docker manors to the Lowthers in 1690. Mr. Ducket's 3rd. w. was Eliz., d. of Xfer. Walker, of Workington, by whom he had 2 sons and 3 drs.

Eliz. Ince, d. of Wm. Ford, of Swinley, co. Lanc., Esq., was w. of Thos. Ince, of Ince Hall, near Wigan, Esq., who died about 1654.

Oct. 9, (1639), His [Lord Wm's] Lady Eliz: Howard.—Eliz. Dacre, 3rd. d. and coh. of Thos., Lord Dacre of Gillesland, commonly called Lord Dacre of the North, by Eliz., d. of Sir James Leyburne, of Cunswick, was m. to Lord Wm. Howard (vide Oct. 7) at Audley End, Essex, Oct. 28, 1577. Her sister and coh., Anne, became the w. of Lord Wm's elder bro. Philip, Earl of Arundel. To strengthen the family compact their father the Duke of Norfolk came to the conclusion that he could not do better than take as his 3rd wife the coheiresses' mother Eliz. The Duchess' mother was the d. of Sir Thos. Preston, of Levens, and m. 2ndly Thos. Stanley, 2nd. Baron Monteagle; her paternal grandmother was a d. of Sir Jno. Pennington of Muncaster; and her paternal great grandmother was a d. of Sir Hy. Bellingham—all family connections of the Huddlestons.

Oct. 12, (. . . .), Mris. Marg: Strickland,—eld. d. and coh. of Sir Wm. Alford, of Bylton in Cleveland, Meaux in Holderness, and Kilnwick; m. Jan. 10, 1618-9, Col. Sir Robt. Strickland, of Sizergh Castle, Westm., and Thornton Brigg, Yorks.

Oct. 17, (. . . .), Greg: Walker.

Oct. 30, (. . . .), Mr. Stephen Tempest,—of Broughton Hall, Yorks, s. and h. of Sir Stephen Tempest, Knt., m. 1° Susan, d. and coh. of Wm. Oglethorpe, vide Sep. 22, by whom he had Sir Stephen and others, 2°, Frces., d. of Sir Cotton Gargrave, Knt., of Nostel, co. York. He was a captain in the royal army, for which his estate of Broughton was forfeited to the Parliament. His bro., Capt. John, was slain at Drogheda Aug. 14, 1649.

Neville, of Chevett, co. York, Esq. Walton Hall was taken by the Cromwellians on June 3, 1644.

Nov. 8, (. . . .), Mr. Jno. Ridman, P[riest], (Redman),—a native of Lancashire, arrived at the Engl. Coll. at Rheims Oct. 31, 1584, which he left for that at Rome on Aug. 18 and was admitted there on Sep. 22, 1589, being then aged 22. He was ord. pr. at Rome, and thence left for the English mission Apr. 22, 1592. A few years later he is found at Cansfield Hall or Robert Hall, seats of the Cansfield family, and it is probable that he died at the latter place. He has frequently been confused with his namesake Dr. Jno. Redman, s. of Robt. Redman and his w. Bridget, d. of Dr. Jno. Clement by his w. Margt. Giggs, so intimately connected with the household of Sir Thomas More. These Redmans were of Yorkshire, being descended from Edw. Redman, of Harewood Castle, and his w. Eliz., d. of Wm. Huddleston, of Millom Castle.

Nov. 9, (1646), Joseph Hudd:[leston], Pater meus,—eld. s. of And. Huddleston, vide May 8, b. Nov. 21, 1565 at Seaton, resided at Farington Hall, in Leyland, Lanc., and Hutton John, Cumb. He and various members of his family appear in the recusant rolls as of Farington Hall between 42 Eliz. and 11 Car. 1, and probably earlier and later. In 1606, whilst residing at Farington, he registered other estates in Gloucestershire, late in the possession of Hen. Huddleston, deceased. In June, 1600, he m. Eleanor, vide Feb. 11. According to the pedigree he was bur. on Nov. 19. He had 6 sons,—And., his successor, b. 1603, Dom John, O.S.B., the writer of these obituaries, Rich., b. 1610, Cuth., b. 1611, Wm., b. 1617, a captain in the royal army, and Ferdinando, b. 1620,—and 10 drs., Mary, b. and d. 1601, Mary, vide June 7, Doro., b. 1605, Jane, b. 1607, Margt., b. 1612, Joyce, b. 1613, Bridget, b. 1616, w. of Jno. Pattenson, of Bowsted Hill, Eliz., b. and d. 1619, Eleanor, b. 1622, w. of Rich. Skelton, of High House, Cumb., Esq., and Eliz., b. 1625.

Nov. 11, (. . . .), Mris. Ursula Widdring:[ton],—w. of Robt.

Widdrington, Esq., was the 3rd d. and coh. of David Ingleby, Esq., (2nd. s. of Sir Wm. Ingleby, of Ripley, Knt., treasurer of Berwick, by Anne, d. of Sir Wm. Mallory, of Studley, co. York), and his w. the Lady Anne Nevill, youngest d. of Charles 6th Earl of Westmoreland and 9th Baron Nevill of Raby, by Jane d. of Hen. Howard, Earl of Surrey.

Nov. — (1641), Wm. Shafto,—bapt. Feb. 10, 1606, eld. s. of Wm. Shafto, of Swalwell and Whickham, co. Durham, Esq., was bur. Nov. 20, 1641, and was succeeded by his nephew George.

Nov. 26, (1655), Unkle Richard Hudd:[leston], P:[riest],—b. 1583 at Farington Hall, 7th s. of And. Huddleston, vide May 8, was educated at Rheims, Douay, and the Engl. Coll. at Rome, and was ord. pr. at Douay in 1607. After serving on the mission in England for several years, he returned to Italy, joined the Benedictines at Monte Cassino, was prof., and returned to England in 1619. For some time he was stationed at Farington Hall, in Leyland, and reconciled to the Church many members of the leading families in that locality. Thence he went to Yorkshire, and there continued his good work till his death at Stockeld Park, the seat of the Middletons. He was author of the 'Short and Plain Way to the Faith and Church,' edited by his nephew, Dom John Huddleston, in 1688.

Dec. 2, (1642), Coll: [Sir] Tho: Howard, senior,—of Tursdale, b. Oct. 14, 1596, 4th s. of Lord Wm. Howard, vide Oct. 7, was slain at Pierse-Bridge, co. Durham, and was interred at Cunniscliffe. He m. Margt., d. of Sir Wm. Eure, of Bradley, co. Durham, Knt., (3rd. s. of Wm., 2nd. Lord Eure, by Margt., d. of Sir Edw. Dymock, of Scrivelsby, co. Linc., Knt.), & her mother, Lady Eure, was Cath., d. of Sir Wm. Bowes, of Streatham, Knt., by Mary, only d. of Sir Hen. Scrope, 9th Baron Scrope of Bolton, K.G.

Dec. 8 (. . . .) Mary Paver,—apparently the younger of the two drs. of Rich. Paver, of Braham, co. York, Esq., by Jane, d. of Robt. Oglethorpe, of Rawdon, Esq. Her bro., Lieut.-Col. Rich. Paver, was slain in the King's service at Lincoln. Another bro., Fris. Paver, went to Douay Coll., under the alias of Oglethorpe, and thence proceeded to the Engl. Coll. at Lisbon, where he was admitted Nov. 14, 1628, and, having been ord. priest on July 17, 1633, left for the English mission on the following Sept. 8; acting as chaplain in the royalist army, he was slain at the battle of Marston Moor, July 2, 1644, whilst attending to the wounded.

He appears with his brother Christopher in the pilgrim-book of the English Hospital at Rome as from Oxford, "Jan. 27, 1632, after a long quarantine at Civita Vecchia. Dined in the refectory."

Edward [sic] Napper was matriculated as a student of Baliol Coll: the 24 of July 1590: Dor. James beinge then Vice-Chancellor: Ita Testor Jo: Thimble.

J. N. natus die Lunæ in Vigil's Sti. J. Baptistæ ante meridiem ejusdem diei, An: Dni. 1589.

Joyce Naper borne Munday ye 23 of June 1580, before noone of the same day: } On June 23, 1636. she is 47.

She was the 2nd. d. of Jno. Wakeman, Esq., of Beckford, co. Gloucester, by Ursula, d. of Jno. Giffard, of Chillington, co. Staff., Esq., and m. Edm. Napper in 1609.

J. N. was indict: at Summer Assi: in the 9 yeare Reg: Jacob: [1611], & was comit at ye Ass: in Lent next followinge.

Oct 22, 1612, J. N. went to Bamb:[ury] Cast:[le], & came forth the 17 of Aprill followinge.—This was for recusancy, or for harbouring priests, her husband's uncle, George Napper, having been martyred at Oxford as related below in Nov., 1610, upon which occasion the vice-chancellor, proctors, and officials of the university had put themselves indecently forward.

Decessit 14 die Julii, 1643.

Mrs. Napper was interred with other members of the family in the chancel of Holywell church—"Joyce, the wife of Edm. Napier, buried 12 [sic] Jul. 1643, sister of Edward Wakeman, of Beckford in Gloucestershire."

Gulielmus Napper filius Edwardi et pater Edmi. obiit 30 Januarii, 1621, ano. 19 Jacobi.

Wm. Napper, Esq., was the s. and h. of Edward Napper, of Swyre, co. Dorset, Esq., the first of the family to reside at Holywell Manor, held under long leases from the warden and scholars of Merton College, copies of which are entered in Edm. Napper's MS.

Edward, sometime fellow of All Souls, was buried in the church of St. Peter in the East, leaving by his second wife Anne, d. of Sir Jno. Peto, of Chesterton, co. Warwick (brother of Cardinal Peto), William Napper, as above, a dau. Joan, wife of Thos. Greenwood, of Oxford, Esq., counsellor-at-law, and George. The last studied at Oxford, Douay, and Rheims, and, having been ordained priest in 1596, came to the mission in Oxford in 1603, was apprehended on July 19, and martyred at Oxford for being a priest, Nov. 9, 1610, his head being impaled on the steeple of Christ Church and his quarters upon the four gates of the city.

Wm. Napper mar. Isabel, d. of Edmund ap Howel, or Powell, of Sandford, co. Oxon, Esq. She was interred in the chancel at Holywell July 7, 1584, and he on Feb. 2, 1621-2.

CHILDREN OF EDM. AND JOYCE NAPPER.

William Napper borne the 8 day of June, 1610:—and died in Augt: followinge.

She became a nun.

Edward Napper borne ye 30 day of September, 1613: betweene 4 and 5 a clocke in ye morninge, being Thursday. Mr. Edmund Powell and Mr. Edward Wakeman his godfathers, and Mrs. Mary Lapworth his godmother: God make him his servant.

Mary Lapworth would be a relative of Edm. Napper, as elsewhere (Nov. 3, 1626). He refers to Dr. Lapworth and "my cos. Ann Lapworth." Anne, d. and coh. of Edward Lapworth, M.D., of Oxford, married Wm. Lyde alias Joyner, gent., of Oxford, whose second son Wm. Lyde alias Joyner, born in April, 1622, was the well-known dramatist.

William Napper was borne ye 6 of March Ano. Dni: 1615: beinge Munday about 6 of ye clocke in ye morninge. My Father [Wm. Napper] and my bro: Tho: Napper his godfathers, Mrs. Peto [probably Eleanor, d. of Sir Walter Aston, of Tixall, co. Staff., and wife of Wm. Peto, of Chesterton, co. Warw., 2nd. cos. to Edm. Napper. She was aunt to the first Lord Aston of Forfar.] his godmother. Sit sibi cordi servire Deo.

Wm. Napper went to Douay, where he assumed the surname of his great great grandmother, Anne, d. of Jno. Russell, of Swyre, co. Dorset, a scion of the ducal house of Bedford. His father notes his departure from home as follows:—

Wm Russl went June 14, 1630.

He took the habit at the English Franciscan Monastery at Douay under the religious name of Marianus in 1639, and subsequently, during the Oates Plot, was indicted for high treason at the Old Bailey under the statute of 27 Eliz., and was condemned to death for being a priest. Though reprieved by the king, he was detained in prison till 1684, when he was exiled. He died at Douay Oct. 4, 1693.

George Napper borne the 11 of November 1617, betwene 5 and 6 of the clock upon a Teusday morninge, Mr. Hatton his godfather, and E. Pullen godm: benedicat ei Dns.

Geo. Na[pper] went July 15, 1633,—to St. Omer's College.

George Naper & Margaret Arden were joyned in wedlock the 13 day of January ["being Thursday" another entry says] Anno Dni. 1647: fausta succedant omnia.—She was delivered of a boy abortive ye 25 day of August, being Thursday, between 7 and 8 in ye morning, Anno 1648.

Margaret Arden was the second daughter of Anthony Arden, of Kirklington, co. Oxon, Esq., by Margt., d. of Walter Coxe, of Kirklington, and heiress to her bro. Richard. The register of their other children's births will follow later.

John Napper borne the 16 of January, beinge Saterday, Ao. 1618, between 5 and 6 in the morninge, Mr. Stany his godfather, and Mris. Ann Molins his godmothr; benefaciat ei Dominus:—he sickned on Saterday ye 26 of Febru: and died the Saterday after, March the 4, 1619: secund's eo p: Augs'am.—He was bur. at Holywell on Mar. 7.

Mr. Stan^{y} is probably identical with Fr. Wm. Stanney, O.S.F., commissary-general of the Franciscan province in England.

Mrs. Anne Molyns, of Chinnor, was d. of Sir Ant. Molyns, and 3rd. w. of Wm. Molyns, of Markney, co. Berks, Esq.

Mary Napper borne the 13 of Septembr, 1620, on Wensday between 11 and 12 of the clocke in the morninge: godmothers are Mrs. Mary Flexney and Mrs Anne Joyner: her godfather Mr. William Dillon:—e vita autem exiit 19 die Maii Ano Dni 1621.

The Flexneys were old Oxford people. Mrs. Anne Joyner, w. of Wm. Lyde alias Joyner, of Dorchester, and d. of Edw. Lapworth, Esq., M.D., of Oxford, was a cousin of Edm. Napper, as also was Mr. Wm. Dillon, whose mother Kath., w. of John Dillon, was sister to Mr. Napper's mother.

Elizab: Napper borne in June, 1622, who died in Augt foll: godm: E. Flex[ney] a^{r} d ye midwife.

The register at Holywell church says that she was bur. Aug. 1, 1622.

Christopher Napper was a younger bro. of Edm. Napper. "Mr. Har:" was possibly Fr. Nic. Hart alias Strange and Hammond, S.J., who served in the Oxford district for many years. Mrs. Mary Messenger, Edm. Napper's sister, was the wife of Jno. Messenger, of Gloucestershire, Esq.

Francis Napper became a Franciscan, and died on the mission in England in 1680.

Edmund Napper borne July 29, Ano. 1625, about 12 a clocke in the afternoone: Edmund Powell ye young'r and Mrs. Mary Nap: [per], of Cowley, godfath'r and godmoth'r.

Edm. Powell, jun., of Sandford, Oxon, Esq., cos. to Edm. Napper, mar. Winifred, d. of Jno. Throckmorton, of Coughton Court, co. Warw., Esq. Mrs. Mary Napper would be Edmund's sister-in-law.

Edmund Napper, after studying humanities at St. Omer's College, entered the novitiate S.J. at Tournay, but had to leave on account of ill-health. He then went to Rome, and was admitted into the Engl. College Oct. 22, 1652. He took the oaths May 1, 1653, from which, however, he was dispensed on account of lameness contracted through weakness, which rendered him incapable of following his vocation. Hence he left the college with the intention of returning to England May 26, 1656. What became of him does not appear.

Mary Naper borne July 4, An. Dni. 1627, on a Wensday, at 8 a clock at night, Utty her godm: faciat eam Dn's ancillam sibi: she died on Friday, July 13 followinge.

Utty was the child's eldest sister Ursula, a nun.

Charles Naper borne Septem: 1, 1631, beinge Thursd: between 6 & 7 of the clocke in ye morninge: Edw: Naper his godf: [and eldest brother].

In another hand, under Edmund Napper's nativity, is written:—

Edmundus decessit ex hac vita 26° Februarii anno 1654.

and the following epitaph is engraven "on a white marble of a diamond square at ye high altar" in Holywell Church:—

Here lyeth the body of Edmund Napier, Esq., who deceased the 26, Feb. An. Dom, 1654, aged 75.

The register of his son George's children continues:—

Margaret Naper borne the 30 day of August, being Thursday betwene 7 and 8 in the morning, Anno 1649: faciat sibi ancilla Dom'us.

Mary Naper borne the 15 day of September, being Sunday at 11 of the clock at noone, anno 1650.

Francis Naper borne ye 6 day of June, being Sunday at 10 in the morning, Anno 1652.

On the south side of the church at Holywell, at the upper end, is the following epitaph on a black marble table-monument affixed to the wall:

Memoriæ Sacrum

Georgii Napier de Holywell, Armigeri, Edmundi Napier filii, et Gulielmi Napier Nepotis, qui diem supremum obiit Septembris quarto, An. Dom. 1671, et ætatis suæ quinquagesimo quarto hic obdormiscit. Tres filiæ scil. Margareta, Maria, Francisca, ex Margareta conjuge, quas moriens reliquit hæredes, hoc qualecunque monumentum posuerunt; per solemnia hæc pietatis, et amoris sic contentæ parentare, affectui magno non aliter satisfacturæ.

In eodem tumulo sepulta jacet piissima Dna. Margareta, Georgii Napier, Armigeri, amantissima conjux, quæ debitum mortalitatis persolvit 24. Aprilis An. Dom. 1675. Ætatis suæ, 64.

The arms on this monument are Arg., a saltire betw. 4 roses gu. (Napier) impaling, Erm., a fess checky or and az. (Arden).

Mary, the 2nd. dau., died unmarried May 29, 1672, aged 21, and was buried beside her father.

Frances, the 3rd. dau., married Mr. Wintour.

Margaret, the eldest daughter and coheiress, married Henry Nevill, of Nevill Holt, co. Leicester, Esq., who died June 28, 1728, aged 85. She died in 1723. They had two sons and four daughters:—George, born 1686-7, a lunatic, and Thomas, who mar. Dame Frances Wintour, relict of Sir Chas. Wintour of Lydney, co. Gloucester, but died s. p. in 1722-3; Margaret, wife of Sir Baldwin Conyers; Anne, died in 1701; Frances, wife of John Tasburgh, Esq., of Flixton Hall, co. Suffolk; and Mary Nevill, who married the Rt. Hon. Peter Joseph, Count Migliorucci, Knight of St. Stephens. The countess died in 1742, leaving an only son and heir, Cosmas-Henry-Joseph-Nevill, born 1716, who inherited the estate of Nevill Holt, and married, July 31, 1742, the Lady Mary Lee, 2nd. d. of George-Henry, Earl of Lichfield.

The Napper MS., which contains copies of the various leases of the family estates from an early date, besides other memoranda, was continued by the Countess Migliorucci as a common-place and private letter book.

THE OWST PERMIT

THE FRONTISPIECE

THIS document, granted to Thomas Owst, was handed down in his family until it became the property of Miss Emily Owst Oldfield, who presented it to the late Thomas J. Willson, another descendant. Mr S. J. Nicholl, whose first wife was also a descendant, had it copied by the Autotype process, and has kindly presented the sole use of the negative to the Society. A copy of it is printed in "Poulson's Holderness," but is not quite correct.—J. S. H.

THE REGISTERS OF THE CATHOLIC MISSION OF WINCHESTER, 1721-1826

[The transcript of these registers was prepared by Rev. Raymund Palmer, O.P., for Mr. Frederick A. Crisp, F.S.A., who has placed it at the disposal of the Catholic Record Society. In making the transcript, Father Palmer abbreviated it in the sense that he did not reproduce the full formula of each entry, but after giving one specimen entry in full confined himself subsequently to the names and dates. He also arranged the entries chronologically, so that the baptisms for each year are followed by the marriages for the same twelvemonth, the beginning of the year being reckoned from March 25. The confirmation registers have also been inserted under their proper dates.—E.B.]

Entered in pencil on the title page but without a date is the following record apparently of a marriage.

"John Prendergast and Margaret Breen":

and at the foot of the page is in the Cath. Burying ground called St. James'.

To
The Memory of the Rev^{d}. M^{r}. James Nolan who died July 27, 1779.

Courteous and benevolent in his private character, in his public, zealous and undaunted, he lived to delight, and died to serve, his fellow creatures, having lost his life in the gratuitous discharge of his professional duties to the Prisoners of War Confined in this City, when under the scourge of a dreadful Contagion.
R.I.P.

Pasted upon the binding of the volume is the following Memorandum.

Edmund Wheble	Aug. 19, 1747.
Mary Wheble, his widow	Mar. 17, 1784.

CATHOLIC REGISTERS

COWDRAY, EASEBOURNE AND MIDHURST

[LIKE the Registers of Winchester this transcript was prepared by the late Father Raymund Palmer, O.P., for Mr Frederick A. Crisp, F.S.A., to whom the Society is indebted for its presentation. Although marked with the triple heading, they may be described more fitly as the Registers of the domestic Chapel of the Viscounts Montagu at Cowdray and the Chapel at Easebourne mentioned on page 251, the labours of the Missioners extending over a large area. The lapse from 1762 to 1779 is regrettable.—J. S. H.]

[The children of Richard and Mary Dummer his wife:

Mark Dummer.
Mary Dummer.
William Dummer.
Richard Dummer.
Ann Dummer.
Helena Dummer.
John Dummer.

The names of the three first, Mark, Mary, and William, are put down in a Baptismal Register kept at the Catholic Chapel at Easebourne: the names of Richard, Ann, Helena and John Dumner are not in the Register. But their father and mother professing the Roman Catholic religion, these their four children were most undoubtedly christened by a priest of that persuasion. There is a chasm, or demission, of no Entries of Baptisms in the mentioned Register from the year 1762 to 1779, whether through inattention, or mistake, or accident of the priest who did the duties of that period, I cannot say. But from the period, marks of the time, and the ages of the four, and their parents' account to them, who mentioned to them the name of the Priest who christened them, and their knowledge afterwards of Mr. Blevin doing the duties of the chapel at the time, there is no doubt of their having been baptized at the period of their births.

No. XVI.

THE CATHOLIC REGISTERS OF PERTHÎR IN THE COUNTY OF MONMOUTH, 1758-1818.

INTRODUCTION.

THE County of Monmouth, and especially the north-eastern half of the shire, is remarkable for the fidelity with which its inhabitants clung to the Catholic Church throughout the penal times. The Calvinistic Methodist movement of the late 18th and early 19th centuries, which tardily but effectually protestantized Wales as a whole, left almost untouched the Cambro-British or Silurian population of Gwent and the Celtic part of Herefordshire. Here, therefore, we have the only instance of a people who, though Welsh by race, are not Puritan in religion.

It is necessary to add that, since the date of Catholic Emancipation, the Church has greatly lost ground in this her ancient stronghold. This loss is due to the extinction of the old Catholic families of gentry, to the submersion of the yeomen and, still more, to the enormous emigration of the original peasantry, consequent upon the decay of agriculture. Truth compels one to say that apathy and a failure of the old missionary spirit have largely contributed to the "leakage." Perhaps, also, man values less a treasure of which no one seeks to forcibly deprive him, than one the possession whereof is perilous to his liberty and life.

In the parish of Rockfield, three miles west of the county town, there stood on the bank of the river Monnow, some seventy years ago, a stately mediæval mansion called Perthîr (Welsh, Y Perth Hir—"The long hedge"). This had for many generations belonged to a family named Powel, a cadet branch of the Herbert stock, and had passed by marriage to the Lorymers of Newbold in the same parish. The Powels and the Lorymers alike were staunch Catholics from first to last—as were most of the coat-armour families in this county, and, indeed, almost the entire population of the Monnow Valley.

It was at Perthîr that the Vicar Apostolic of the Western District, the Right Rev. Matthew Prichard, D.D., O.S.F., Bishop of Myra, I.P.I., lived for many years, and died in 1750. He was a Recollect, and during his episcopate the Franciscans were established at Perthîr. In 1808 Perthîr was made the Franciscan novitiate; and it so remained until 1818, when the community was transferred to Aston * and the mission was merged in that of Monmouth.

Bishop Prichard is buried in Rockfield church, and at least two of his priests in the churchyard—one being Father Andrew Weetman, O.S.F., who died 1795.

The estate of Perthîr was sold by William Lorymer in 1820 to a senior branch of the Herbert family, out of whose hands it passed about the year 1870. † The mansion was demolished circa 1830. Some of the paintings from the chapel are preserved in Saint Mary's Catholic Church, Monmouth, including a Crucifixion and the old altar-piece, which represents Saint Catherine, the patron.

It was not until the troubles consequent upon the Jacobite rising of 1745 had subsided, that the Catholics of Great Britain ventured to keep records of their Missions; and Registers of an earlier date than 1777, when the first Catholic Relief Bill was passed, are rare. The friars at Perthîr, however, made and kept rough memoranda of Baptisms from 1751 onwards. Of these a regular series from 1758 is entered in the oldest book; but down to 1775 the entries are in some cases hastily and irregularly jotted down by an imperfectly educated scribe, and in others professedly transcribed from loose slips and casual notes in various books. From the commencement of the second book, in 1799, the entries are evidently regular and consecutive.

The earliest volume contains some notes made in the first few years of the eighteenth century, as follows:—

Memoranda of Masses to be said for certain members of the Turner family, &c.

Rough entries of Baptisms &c. in the Mission of Maple Durham, near Reading.

Account of moneys received from Mr. Englefield, Madam Blount &c., and of expenses in connection with a journey to Saint Omer and Douay.

Theological notes on the General Councils &c., not transcribed for the purposes of this work.

Thanks are due to the Rev. Sidney Nicholls, priest in charge of the Mission of Monmouth, for allowing a transcript to be made; to the Rev. Trevor Hughes, B.A., of the Institute of Charity, Rector of the Wadhurst novitiate, for procuring a copy to be made of my transcript (which said transcript, being bound in a volume with others, was not available for the printer's use), and for making with his own hand a necessary rearrangement of the Index.

The correction of the present copy has been made with all due care.

JOHN HOBSON MATTHEWS.

Register of Bishop Sharrock. [Omitted here because copied later from the original.]

These are true copies taken by me P. Jones.

[The copy of the Perthîr Register contains two earlier entries, viz:—]

William son of William Parry and Margaret his wife, was born 25 May 1751, and baptized 29 June 1751 by the Rev. John Hickins. Sponsors: George Davis and Mary Willot.

John son of Robert Needham* and Elizabeth his wife, was born 19 August 1752, and baptized 23 August 1752 by the Rev. John Hickins. Sponsors: John Vaughan Esq^re^ ✠ and Mary Roe.

[The same copy supplies the name of the officiating priest, beginning in 1758 with Edmund Eccles, whose name will here be understood down to 27 June 1763 unless another is mentioned. In the copy there is no mention of the place of abode of the father.]

These are true copies taken by me P. Jones.

OF PERSONS AND PLACES

* An asterisk signifies that a name occurs more than once on a page.
[n] Signifies a note on the page.

The town is the general unit of reference; Churches, Colleges, Prisons, etc., being indexed under London, Oxford, etc.

The translations of some Latin names must be arbitrary, Jacobus being Jacob or James; Joanna, Joan or Jane, etc. The last forms, as the most common, have been adopted.

Dominus, like Sir, being applicable to anyone from the Pope to a simple priest or choir monk, and sometimes improperly used of a friar; or from royalty to the merest position of respectability, Domina being the female equivalent, they are often left as "Dnus" and "Dna," being obviously meant only for "Mr" or "Mrs."

Cross references are given where equivalent names are far apart, or dissimilar, as Africanus, Æthiops and Niger; Awincle, Avincle and Owincle.
